CAMDEN RURAL SCHOOL FAIR

A very successful Rural School Fair was held at Wesley School, on Friday, Nov. 14th. The pupils at Wesley and Hinch Schools combined to hold this Fair, and much credit is due the teachers, Miss M. Mitchell and Miss Ruth Patterson, who interested the children in the work. The prize money was donated by the school boards of Wesley and Hinch schools, and special prizes by the merchants of Newburgh. Messrs. G. B. Curran and P. S. D. Harding, of the Agricultural Office, Napanee, were the judges.

The exhibits of colts, calves, chickens, potatoes, and mangels were of an exceptionally high character. Next year the Department of Agriculture intend holding a large Rural School Fair taking in all the schools of Camden, if sufficient support is promised.

CENTREVILLE.

A pretty wedding was solemnized in the church of St. Anthony of Padua Centreville, on Tuesday, October 28th, when Margaret, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry McKeown, was united in marriage to Joseph Murphy, of Tamworth. The wedding party entered the church at nine o'clock to the strains of Mendelssohn's wedding march, played by Miss Marion Murphy cousin of the groom. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. J. J. McCarthy in the presence of a large number of friends. The bride wore a handsome gown of champagne silk chiffon over lace, and a very pretty hat of champagne velvet, with ostrich bandeau. She was attended by the groom's sister, Miss Teresa Murphy, who wore a suit of blue whipcord, with hat to match. Anthony McKeown, brother of the bride, was groomsmen.

After the ceremony the bridal party drove to the home of the brides parents were a number of relatives awaited them, and all sat down to a sumptuous repast. The happy couple motored to Napanee and left on the 4.20 train to visit friends in Toronto and other points. The bride's travelling suit was of navy blue serge, with Bulgarian trimming, and black picture hat.

The groom's gift to the bride was a silver tea set, to the bridesmaid a gold chain and locket, to the groomsmen, a pair of gold cuff links, and to the organist, a gold bar pin set with pearls. The bride was the recipient of many useful and costly presents, showing the high esteem in which the popular young couple are held. On their return they will reside near Tamworth.

EFFORTS CROWNED WITH SUCCESS

The Interdenominational Missionary Conference and Laymen's Banquet held Monday in Napanee, was, from the points of view of attendance and addresses, a huge success. This old county of Lennox and Addington as compared with some other counties, measured up above the average in missionary enthusiasm, if not missionary givings. The matter of addresses was to many a revelation. The Rev. Dr. Endicott by his addresses moved his hearers one seat forward without them knowing it, and now they sit largely in the "love-feast" pew, for all who heard are convinced that we are our brother's keeper.

Rev. Mr. Savary, of Kingston, gave the delegates an experience talk on the "Value of a thorough canvas." His congregation has set us all an example in liberality and thoroughness.

Mr. Smith was breezy and invigorating in his talk on "Missions as life to and in the church." Indulging as he did in different literary vernaculars, one readily thought that the real missionary can "speak with tongues."

Mr. Rose and Mr. Beaton both hailed from Toronto to help us. And when we asked for bread they gave us the genuine thing. They were a well matched team. The Secretary carefully watched them tug at their loads, and neither of them dragged. They "pulled the wheat into a heap" and we, as they proceeded, soon got the bread of the Conference theme, "The problem of Missions in the Local Congregation."

In the evening about two hundred and fifty men sat down to a well prepared banquet, and at the close listened to two excellent talks. Bishop Lucas, of the Mackenzie River District, was a speaker who effected much. His presence and person were entirely free from any pretence of eminence, although in the writer's mind he is the most self-sacrificing bishop in Canada and therefore worthy of the most honor. That far-north part of Canada which is his territory may not generally appeal to us, but the bishop before he was through had us shaking hands with the Indians and others to whom he is privileged to minister. The reach was a long one but nevertheless we shook.

When the male quartette had rendered to the great delight of the crowd, a couple of sacred selections, the people had their breathing spell; but so great seemed the appetite for more "speech" that you could almost hear them say "come on" when Mr. Matthew Parkinson, a newspaper man of Toronto, arose to address the assembly. He was a Scotch-Irish, humorous, keen, apt and forceful speaker. He took us back behind the veil of prejudice so far that, no doubt, many felt ashamed that they had ever had adverse views of missions. When we touched elbows with the apostles we had to be like them; and what did they do? The consistency of life and

He took us back behind the veil of prejudice so far that, no doubt, many felt abashed that they had ever had adverse views of missions. When we touched elbows with the apostles we had to be like them; and what did they do? The consistency of life and words and policies constitute grandeur of "front." What is our front? Can we forget local and home duties as to moral reform and be right through and through, if only we show a little zeal for missions? This whole thing begins at home. After proceeding along that line for a few minutes, Mr. Parkinson went directly to the work of showing how we can overtake the task of going in and possessing the lands where the heathen in their eagerness to have the gospel, have lifted the entrance doors off their hinges. If the communicants of our churches would give the equivalent of one cigar a week, the financial provision for the task would be made. Systematic giving makes the extraction of the "hawbee" easy.

The sessions were respectively presided over by Messrs. W. T. Gibbard, A. W. Benjamin and W. S. Herrington, K.C. Mr. Geo. Gibbard, Mr. F. Miller and others led in discussions.

GREEDY RAILWAYS HANDICAP FARMERS.

World, October 30th, 1913.

A Waterloo County man, holding large land interests in the Canadian west, called on The World to compliment the paper on its stand respecting freight and other railway rates in the west. This gentleman has just returned from Alberta and although he speaks highly of the crop, he is much incensed at the way the western farmers are handicapped, principally by the railways.

"We gave the C. P. R. half the country to build the road," he said, "and now they are getting the other half for taking the crops out. Every move of the railway is to get the settler in and then soak him. Look at the discrimination in passenger rates. You can go from Toronto to Edmonton and return for $43, but if you want to take a single from Edmonton to Toronto you are held up for $52."

WHELE DOES RAKE-OFF GO?

"What about freight rates?" this gentleman was asked.

"These are certainly exorbitant," he said. "Do you know that I required to ship about a car of oats from Battleford to Berlin and they wanted to charge me 15c a bushel, or $300 a car. The farmer gets 20c a bushel for the oats, so you can see how the cost to the consumer is apportioned. The charge on the wheat for the same trip is 25c a bushel."

"And this is not the only way the farmer is held up. He sells two and one-half bushels of wheat at 60c a bushel, or $1.50, and this makes 100 lbs. of flour and the offal. The farmer has to buy back the flour at $3. Now I would like to know who gets all this rake-off."

WANTS FREE WHEAT.

"Yes, the people are strongly in favor of free wheat if only to get the benefit of another market. It is well known that American prices are higher, and the freight charges to Minneapolis should not be more than to Winnipeg."

Concluding, The World's informant stated that from one farm which he works on shares he only got $300 as his share. The total revenue was $1700, but the cost of living and help was $1400, and the balance, $300, was therefore all he could get.

PURITY and QUALITY

These two essentials explain the great increase in demand for our bread since the installation of our new electrical bread mixer.

We have now a thoroughly up-to-date and sanitary bread plant, including bread mixer, sanitary steel troughs, etc. As a result we are able to place before the public a pure, clean wholesome, smooth-grained loaf of bread.

We ask all housewives who desire purity and quality in their bread to try a loaf of this bread and be convinced of its superiority.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—Cecil cock and William Sherman, aged 17 and 18 respectively will be set for preliminary hearing on a charge of murdering Thomas Crisp Ralph McCallum will be used as material witness in the trial, a result of the verdict returned last night by Chief Coroner Job jury, which investigated the circumstances of the shooting affair at Port Credit, last Saturday, in which Crisp was fatally wounded.

The jury found that Thomas came to his death as a result of a shot fired, either by William Sherman or Cecil Babcock, in an interchange of shots, with Crisp on the one side and Sherman and Babcock on the other. Their verdict was homicide, and will be left to the jury in the case to say whether it was a case of murder or manslaughter. Incorporated in the verdict was a strong recommendation that more stringent regulations be enforced regarding the rental of firearms, and that a limit for the purchase of same be fixed.

William Sherman, one of the accused of the murder, told in an intelligent and straightforward manner of the occurrence of the day the time of the shooting. The boys had left on the nine o'clock train for Port Credit, and spent the afternoon and part of the afternoon playing with rabbits and at a target, walking along the road toward Crisp. Crisp began shooting in the air to frighten his companion in a short time they began retreating in the same manner. In the middle of a half an hour they arrived in the gate of Mr. Hall's property when Crisp, who was in the front, turned and began shooting in the direction of the two boys, Sherman and Babcock, who were walking a distance behind him. Price dived behind a telegraph post, while the other boys sought refuge in the trees on either side of the road. These positions Babcock and Sherman

SCRAMBLE FOR CLOTHES.

Bodies of Executed Federals Stripped by Mexican Rebels.

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 18.—Eleven men are known to have been executed in Juarez since Francisco Pancho Villa and his rebel forces captured the city on Saturday morning. The rebel officials admit the execution of that number. The bodies of most of the victims are still unburied.

The body of Col. Enrique Portillo, executed on Saturday, was brought to El Paso for interment here yesterday. It was divested of its trousers and shoes by a rebel who was short of clothing while it lay in the military barracks in Juarez.

All rebels are badly in need of clothing, and the distribution of captured federal uniforms made by Villa did not go around, so there has been a scramble for the clothing of the men executed.

Wilson Thinks Huerta Will Have to Capitulate.

Financial Boycott of the Present Regime in Mexico Will Bring Results Thinks U. S. President and He Is Waiting His Time—Changes in Huerta's Cabinet May Mean Dissolution or Defiance.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—That the United States in its policy toward the Provisional Government in Mexico is content to await the outcome of the steady pressure being exerted to bring about the downfall of the Huerta regime was apparent yesterday in official circles here. Exciting rumors from Mexico City wholly failed to ruffle the calm confidence of President Wilson or Secretary of State Bryan.

"The mills of the gods grind slowly," was the declaration of one high official of the Government in discussing the developments. The President was not at all aroused by reports that Mr. O'Shaughnessy, the American charge d'affairs, was about to quit Mexico City, and it was stated that no orders had been given either to Mr. O'Shaughnessy or John Linn at Vera Cruz, to leave Mexico. Rumors that the American embassy would be closed within 48 hours were characterized in official sources as "fake."

The President told callers during the day that while there had been some change in the Mexican relations as to persons there had been no essential change in the circumstances to which he had referred the other day as seeming favorable to a solution of the difficulties.

The President, it is said, is confident that the financial boycott of the Huerta regime by the United States and the great foreign powers will be a powerful factor in bringing about the end of Huerta.

While in some quarters there was a disposition to regard Cabinet changes in Mexico, as the forerunner of disintegration of the Huerta regime, in others it was pointed out that they might mark the adoption by Gen. Huerta of a more active and vigorous policy and one more defiant of the United States Government.

The possibility of an interruption of railroad communication between the City of Mexico and Vera Cruz, which is now practically the only outlet for the capital, is giving considerable concern to the officials here and it is said that any attempt to thus completely isolate Americans and other foreigners in the Mexican capital would result in quick action by the United States to prevent it.

Secretary Bryan had heard from some of his agents that the line of communication was threatened, but it was not clear whether the interruption was to be expected as a result of some decree of the Huerta Government or from operations of the revolutionists, who have suddenly appeared in some force in the difficult mountain country lying between Vera Cruz and the capital.

TERRIER WARNED POLICE.

Dog's Antics Result in Capture of Burglar in Toronto.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—His suspicions aroused by the actions of a small white terrier dog, Constable Crumme entered the rear of the tailoring shop of A. Samuel & Co., at 321 West Queen street, at 12.30 this morning and caught Samuel A. Corbett, a trainman, of 19 Baker avenue, West Toronto, rifling the premises.

The constable nightly walks up a back lane on Queen street to see that all is in order, and last night, on coming to the rear of Samuel's shop, the white terrier ran up to him, fawned upon him, cringing as if in fear. Entering the premises through a back shed, the constable came upon Corbett bending over a pile of clothing. Asked what he was doing there, the man feigned drunkenness, and mumbled an unintelligible reply, but at last said he lived there. Hearing a noise in the store, Constable Crumme promptly handcuffed his man to a post and went in search of an accomplice, but could find none. A police call brought half a dozen more officers and the premises were thoroughly searched, but the other culprit had escaped.

Corbett proved a tartar when it came to getting him in the patrol wagon. He fought three policemen as long as he could stand against them, and after he had been placed in the patrol, he jumped on the guard and attempted to break away.

KILLED BY MOTOR.

Little Girl Ran Down Returning From an Errand.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—While running along the roadway with two other little girls on Clinton street, just north of College, at six o'clock last night, eight-year-old May Gordon of 600 College street was run down by a motor car driven by Frank Bethel of 433 Palmerston avenue, sustaining injuries to her head and body from which she died an hour later in the Western Hospital.

At the time of the accident the child was returning with some wool, with which her mother was going to knit a woollen bonnet for her chum's doll. The children were all running quickly down the sidewalk, when May swerved suddenly to the roadway, and although one of the other girls called to her to watch out for the approaching motor car, she ran directly in front of it, was struck in the temple, and thrown unconscious underneath the wheels of the car.

Mr. Bethel, the driver, picked up the unconscious child and drove at top speed to the Western Hospital, but she never regained consciousness.

Driving to the detective office at the City Hall, Mr. Bethel told of the manner. In the course of an hour they arrived in front of the gate of Mr. Hall's property. Crisp, who was in the lead, began shooting in the direction of the two boys, Sherman Babcock, who were walking some distance behind him. Price dodged a telegraph post, while the boys sought refuge behind on either side of the road. From positions Babcock and Sherman firing in the direction of the boy, Price, but only in fun, with intention of hitting him. Price was firing at them. The fourth McCallum, had no rifle, so he took the side of the road, out of line of fire. After a time Sherman turned his back to Crisp and reloading his gun, when he heard a shot, and immediately after Babcock called to him to look at it. Sherman saw Crisp lying on the ground, and both boys ran over to him. Sherman claimed that his shot did not hit Crisp, as he had heard the post. He also stated that Babcock had told someone that he (Babcock) had shot Tommy accident-

ly. McCallum told practically the same story, while Constable Price stated that Babcock had called at No. 3 police station to have the boy accidentally shot. Other witnesses testified, but their testimony had very little weight, other than to establish the fact that Crisp had fired his rifle from Solomon's, a second-hand dealer on King street.

Constable Johnson in his address to the jury laid stress on the fact that the boys were committing an unlawful act and must be held responsible for the result of the deed, as it resulted in the death of another boy. He who fired the shot was guilty of murder. It was his opinion that there was no possibility of the shooting having been an accident, as the deed, according to evidence, fired at forty or fifty shots. He blamed the circulation of trashy books, west shows and melodramatic picture shows for exercising influence on young boys.

Montague Will Be Opposed.

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 18. — The alphas have decided to oppose Hon. Montague in St. Andrew's. The date will be J. W. Wilton, baronet, of Winnipeg, who has large estates in Kildonan. The Liberals intend to make it one of the hottest contests ever fought in Manitoba. Campaign will only last thirteen election taking place a week next Saturday. The constituency is away up to the east side of Winnipeg, and it will be impossible to open two polls owing to ice formed on the river.

Sir William Van Horne Ill.

TORONTO, Nov. 18. — Becoming ill while at the King Edward Hotel last night, Sir William Van Horne had to be rushed to Montreal before midnight. His condition was said to be such as to cause concern to his friends. Sir William was to have spent the remainder of the week in Toronto, but following an attack of weakness it was deemed advisable for him to return to Montreal for medical treatment.

Other Charged With Murder.

EDMONTON, Alta., Nov. 18. — A. J. Flynn, merchant at Thorne, formerly a minister here, died of illness alleged to have been inflicted on his wife while temporarily insane. His young child was killed at the same time. Mr. Flynn was injured, and Flynn is in Edmonton jail to-day charged with its murder.

HUGE ROCKSLIDE.

Tracks In Mountains Covered For 300 Feet.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 18. — A rock slide occurred at Sea Bird Bluff, near Ruby Creek, at five o'clock yesterday morning, completely covering the double track of the Canadian Pacific Railway with rocks, some weighing as much as 100 tons each. The track was buried 60 feet deep for a distance of 300 feet. A large force of workmen was rushed to the scene from Vancouver, and dynamite is being freely used to remove the blockade. No trains were in the vicinity when the slide came down. It was expected a temporary track would be built around the slide by to-night. In the meantime passengers are being transferred afoot.

ELECTION IS PROTESTED.

Four Petitions Charge Morris With Corruption In Chateaugay.

MONTREAL, Nov. 18. — The election of James Morris as M.P. for the county of Chateaugay was protested yesterday afternoon, when petitions to unseat and disqualify him were deposited in the Superior Court office at Valleyfield.

Bribery, promises of public offices, undue influence, defraying transportation, treating, intimidation and furnishing vehicles illegally are amongst the charges against the Conservative M.P. and his agents.

Four petitions covering the above were deposited, sworn to by four electors of Chateaugay county.

Mustn't Dance Tango.

BERLIN, Nov. 18. — Emperor William has forbidden officers of the German army and navy while in uniform, to dance the tango, the one step and the two step, according to the newspaper, The Salon. His Majesty also has instructed the officers to avoid visiting families where these dances are favored and an actress of the Royal Theatre in Berlin was advised yesterday by Count George Von Huelsen-Haeseler, the Imperial director of theatres, not to participate in a tango tournament.

way, and although one of the other girls called to her to watch out for the approaching motor car, she ran directly in front of it, was struck in the temple, and thrown unconscious underneath the wheels of the car.

Mr. Bethel, the driver, picked up the unconscious child and drove at top speed to the Western Hospital, but she never regained consciousness.

Driving to the detective office at the City Hall, Mr. Bethel told of the occurrence and explained in detail how it occurred. He was not detained by the police.

Aristocratic Glassmakers.

Glassmaking used at one time to be the most aristocratic of all industries. A French law passed under Louis IX. allowed none but men of noble birth to set up glass blowing establishments or even to work therein. For many centuries this was the only trade noblemen could venture to work in without any danger of losing caste. The art of glassmaking reached England through France, and in its early days those engaged in it styled themselves "gentlemen glass blowers."

Sunken Walnut Logs.

On the bottom of Gull Lake, in Michigan, lies a small fortune in walnut logs, which were once considered of so little value that they were towed out into deep water and sunk. As the lake is 300 feet deep in places the logs are likely to remain a dead loss. The logs are really the butt ends of fine walnut trees which were cut down years ago. Later the stumps were pulled out, hauled into the lake and let go.

SNOWDEN HOWLED DOWN.

Socialist Fares Badly at Hands of Suffragettes.

SHEFFIELD, Eng., Nov. 18. — A wild suffragette disturbance occurred here last night. Philip Snowden, Socialist member of Parliament for Blackburn, attempted to address a "no conscription" meeting arranged by the Labor party, but was howled down by suffragettes. Stewards promptly took a hand, and in the scrimmage were attacked also by male sympathizers with the women. Some of the stewards were kicked and badly bruised.

In spite of the fact that many of the disturbers were ejected, the uproar persisted to such an extent that at the end of half an hour the meeting was abandoned. A large section of the audience displayed anger at the chairman for calling the police to his aid, declaring that the working classes had had enough of the police.

"No Rent," Sylvia's Latest.

LONDON, Nov. 18. — Miss Sylvia Pankhurst, addressing an open air meeting at Bow last night, announced that the next suffragist campaign would be a "no rent" strike among the working women of London.

Mormons Contribute $70,000.

CARDSTON, Alta., Nov. 18. — About $70,000 was the amount set by the Canadian president of the Mormon Church here yesterday as representing the tithes of the Mormon residents of Canada. Tithes are paid to headquarters at Salt Lake City, Utah, and no questions are asked as to what is done with the money. It is estimated that there are 7,000 Mormons resident in Alberta.

Judge's Golden Wedding.

BERLIN, Ont., Nov. 18. — Judge and Mrs. Chisholm celebrated their golden wedding anniversary yesterday, surrounded by their family and friends.

Duncan Chisholm and Mary Craig became man and wife in Port Hope in 1863. The judge was elevated to the bench of Waterloo County many years ago, and has since resided here.

lots of money in the hands of Hon. Mr. Rogers and the manner in which Premier Borden neglects his erstwhile promises of purity of elections with prompt exposure and punishment for electoral wrongdoing.

On April 10th, 1912, the riding of Macdonald was opened by the partisan appointment of W. D. Staples, the sitting member, to the Dominion Grain Commission. The riding was carefully nursed by the Roblin-Rogers election combination, and on September 20th, the writs were issued. On September 25th, Alex. Morrison was chosen the government candidate. On October 5th, nominations resulted in a contest between R. L. Richardson Independent Liberal, and Alex. Morrison, the government candidate.

Immediately a carnival of corruption and violence set in. The campaign was personally directed by Hon. Robert Rogers, and hordes of the most vicious election workers were imported. Not only were the familiar Tory arguments of money and whiskey there, but even the machinery of the law was prostituted. Liberal workers were dogged by real or bogus detectives and police. Their baggage was searched in their hotels by gumshoe men. They were threatened with arrest and many were arrested, ill-treated, starved, hidden from their friends, spirited from one part of the riding to another, and after being given "Third Degree" treatment were offered their freedom if they would perjure themselves by confessing imaginary crimes.

Four men in particular were thus treated, D. H. Walkinshaw, R. J. A. Pénice, S. J. Sullivan and W. B. Sifton, while several Liberal members of Parliament were shadowed and insulted by detectives, and themselves threatened with arrest if they did not leave the riding. Magistrate McMicken of Winnipeg, was named as a leader in this work. It was declared in parliament subsequently that he had issued blank warrants for the arrest of Liberal workers, and that men had actually been arrested on these "lettres-de-cachet." In one case it was stated that documents had been stolen from a Liberal worker's grip, diary forged to make it appear that he had committed bribery, and violent efforts were made to bully him into admitting that the forgeries were genuine.

As a result of these highly Conservative methods, Mr. Morrison was elected by a large majority.

Immediately afterwards, on October 18th, proceedings were instituted against Magistrate McMicken, who was charged with conspiracy to defeat the ends of justice. Mr. McMicken has since resigned from the bench.

On November 18th the election was protested, the petition reciting serious charges against Sir Rodmond Roblin and Hon. Robert Rogers, that they had instructed peace officers, detectives and constables to conspire for the arrest and illegal imprisonment of Liberal workers, with many other election crimes. The Tory organization was untrusting to prevent exposure in the courts. On December 20th, "preliminary objections" were made against the petition, which were dismissed. Immediately appeal was taken in the effort to indefinitely delay trial. These appeals were carried through that Hon. Mr. Rogers dared not let him face the courts. During one of the most important sessions of parliament since Confederation, Macdonald was improperly and corruptly represented. During that session Mr. Alex. Morrison sat in an extreme back bench to which he was not entitled and at the end he drew the full indemnity of $2,500 to which he had no right.

During the whole session Mr. Morrison was only noticed on the opening day when he was introduced by his political sponsor, Hon. Robert Rogers and Hon. W. J. Roche. From that day he never opened his mouth to join in debate, nor did anything in Parliament or out. He simply voted blindly for the government, and drew $2,500 for the job.

This is the parliamentary record of Mr. Alex. Morrison, ex-M. P. : Speeches, none.

Motions or amendments, none.

Voted against Sir Wilfrid Laurier's amendment to the Speech from the Throne censuring the Macdonald and Richelieu bye-election corruption; against every Liberal amendment to the Borden Naval Aid Bill; for every government motion regarding the Naval Aid Bill; against Mr. Gauthier's vote of censure on Hon. Mr. Coderre respecting the Hochelaga bye-election personation; paired against Mr. Oliver's motion of censure on Hon. Mr. Rogers in connection with the Prince Albert Homestead scandal; paired in support of the "gag" rule; voted for the $15,000,000 subsidy gift to the Mackenzie & Mann, and against the Liberal proposals to either make this a loan or to secure some substantial return from the C. N. R. for it; against the Liberal amendment to the Highways Aid Bill, which was designed to give the Provinces their proper constitutional control of the proposed expenditures—in everything else the same consistent and silent support of the Borden government.

Macdonald has reason to be ashamed of the manner in which Mr. Morrison was elected. It has reason to feel that Mr. Morrison's conduct in parliament was on a par with the means by which he got there.

WHAT BORDEN POLICY MEANS. ADMIRAL FREEMANTLE SAYS IT INVOLVES DOWNING STREET DOMINATION.

Mr. Borden, as leader of the centralist party in Canada, who are anxious to introduce Downing Street domination into Canada, should be a good friend of the British Admiral Freemantle. Writing in the London Morning Post a few days ago, the doughty Admiral said: "Centralists insist that when Britain fights every Dominion must be fighting too. Free choice for Britain, and compulsory choice for the Dominions? The answer is, 'certainly,' and Laurier's tentative proposal for the neutrality of Canada under certain conditions is an unpractical chimera."

During the South African war would there have been such an eagerness to volunteer for service if Canada had no freedom in the matter, but the "compulsory choice" to take part in that war? Should Mr. Borden's plans materialize, Canada would undoubtedly have to accept the "compulsory choice" of Downing Street. The Laurier plan would give Canada a navy of her own, under the free control of her own Parliament, and ready to be placed by that Parliament at the order of the British government whenever Canada may consider such a step necessary.

It is especially provided in the Militia Act that Canadians cannot be sent abroad to foreign wars. This permanent newspaper was called the Toledo Blade, in recognition of the fact that Toledo, Spain, was famed all over the world for the quality of the sword blades which it produced.—Ladies' Home Journal.

ELEVATORS IN EUROPE.

Except in First Class Hotels They Are Crude Affairs.

The use of passenger elevators is not nearly so general in Europe as it is in the United States. In Germany and France most hotels of the very highest class, catering to wealthy foreign travelers, are equipped with elevators much like the American type, and intended to be freely used both up and down. The cheapest hotels and many very good ones at moderate prices, though four or five stories high, are not provided with elevators.

The almost universal type for medium priced hotels has a wooden cage 3 by 5 feet, intended for five persons. It is driven by a four horsepower electric motor and controlled by a series of push buttons on the outside, at the bottom. A person desiring to go to the third floor enters the car, and the attendant (or, rather, any servant, for there is no elevator boy) pushes button No. 3, the car stops at the third floor, and the passenger steps out and calls down the shaft that the car is free.

Sometimes the button control is inside, in which case the attendant accompanies the passenger. Sometimes there is an annunciator, but not often, because the car is not supposed to be called to an upper floor to carry passengers down. Stairs are for that purpose. As the French have it, this institution is an "ascenseur" and not by any chance a "descenseur." In any case, it is a privilege to use it.

A few office buildings are equipped with the same type elevator; but, as a rule, none except the most pretentious offices have elevators.—Indianapolis News.

EASTER ISLAND.

A Deserted Land and Its Mysterious Crude Stone Statues

Huge and grotesque stone images stand and lie over the fertile surface of a deserted island far south in the Pacific. It is a place that Poe might have sung into existence or Rider Haggard created for the scene of some fantastic romance. Even its name—Easter Island—seems more literary than geographical. Easter Island, 2,000 miles from South America and 1,400 miles east of Pitcairn Island, has on all the forty-five square miles of its area less than 200 people. But it has other inhabitants, great masses of rock, 600 in number, each carved into the semblance of a human figure, the origin of which is a mystery. These statues weigh on an average from ten to twelve tons each, some of them reaching a weight of forty tones. A few of them stand on strong platforms 400 feet long, and many similar platforms stand untenanted.

At the quarry, which is a crater (for Easter Island is of volcanic origin), a number of these images lie half formed as the vanished sculptors left them.

There is another crater where the crowns of the figures were made from rock of a different sort. Here, too, are found unfinished specimens.—Churchman.

BAD FOR PRONUNCIATION

Silent Reading and Neglect of Conversation Are Harmful.

Perhaps the most potent of forces toward diverse pronunciation especially difference in accent, fact that we seldom or never a conversation a vast number of which nevertheless constitute important and indispensable part vocabulary.

"By silent reading and neglect conversation language itself," Dr. Richard Grant White, "is coming disuse." The result of this is not only that we are always tally registering pronunciations far to ourselves, which we have means of ascertaining to be uncorrect or ridiculous, but also that the tendencies of our language, unreined by the conservative force which casual use in conversation might, rapidly foster new pronunciation and produce a diversity of pronunciation even among the most careful speakers.

All these influences obviously impel each other in resisting trend toward uniform pronunciation and facilitate the progress of the encies of speech peculiar to our fish tongue.—Robert J. Menner, Atlantic Monthly.

FREAKISH PHOTOS

Moonlight Effects Obtained by Taking the Sun.

TRICK OF THE GHOST FAKE.

"Spook" and "Vision" Pictures Only Require a Little Care and Simple Apparatus, and It Is Easy to Photograph a Man Inside a Pint Bottle.

Moonlight effects in photography are generally gained by trickery. Of course it is possible to take photographs by moonlight, the exposure varying from thirty minutes to two hours. The results, however, are rarely satisfactory, owing to the movement of the shadows producing a blurred effect in the finished print. To obtain a moonlight picture of the approved sort—a fine cloud effect with the moon casting a long line of brilliant light upon water—special preparations must be made.

A rather cloudy sunset must be chosen. Then when the sun drops low on the horizon and is partly obscured
by the cloud bank one seizes the opportunity to secure a snapshot (the lens being well "stopped down") right into the eye of the light. The plate thus obtained should be slightly underdeveloped. If all has gone well the resulting negative will supply a picture
exactly resembling a moonlight effect,
and by carefully gumming a small circle of opaque paper upon the film one is able to print out the "moon" into the bargain.

Photographs in which the snow appears to be falling are usually produced by artificial means. If the subject is to be a portrait the sitter should be garbed appropriately and placed before a wintry background. When the negative is obtained it should be dried and well varnished, then placed flat upon a table with the film side uppermost. Take a soft toothbrush charged with rather thick india ink and carmine mixed up with water and draw it over the teeth of the comb, which should be held some little distance from the negative. If this operation is carefully managed the result will be an irregular spattering of the pigment upon the varnished film, and when this is dry a print will be produced which looks just as though the negative had been taken in a snowstorm.

Photographs of the class in which ghosts or visions appear may be "faked" in several ways. The first of these may be described in the duplicate ex-posure method. Suppose, for example, we wish to photograph a man inside a bottle which will hold no more than a pint of liquid. To accomplish this apparently impossible feat proceed as follows: First photograph the bottle standing upon a dull black support and with similar background. While focusing take care to mark out what will be the bottle's boundaries on the plate
by fixing little pieces of gummed paper
to the ground glass screen of the camera. Then get your man to stand or sit in a chair upon a black cloth with a smooth black curtain behind him.
Focus upon him so that he falls within the boundaries of the bottle, this being easily managed by means of the

THEY PUZZLE GREAT MINDS.

Simple Words Too Profound For Human Understanding.

Q.—Can there be two kinds of infin-
ities or two infinite spaces?

A.—The writer of this question must decide. The nearest star is distant twenty-five trillion miles. Write a row of units 111111... to the star and let each unit represent one mile; then the distance represented by a line of 1's, twenty-five trillion miles long, submerges all human powers of imagination. But write a row of 222222... twenty-five trillion miles long; then the number of miles represented would be twice as great. Then write a row of 333333... equally long, and the distance expressed would be nine times as great as that represented by the 1's.

But no human can think of the distance expressed by the 1's. Let the first row of figures extend twenty-five trillion or fifty or a thousand trillion miles to the east; then a row could be extended toward the west. Many millions of years would be required to write the long rows. Suppose that you write 9's both ways during a thousand million years each. Then the distance in miles would be thinner than

MAN EATERS OF AFRICA.

The Lions and Crocodiles Are In a Class by Themselves.

Man eating lions have always been fairly common in East Africa. The most noted but far from exceptional case was that of the two man eaters
which for a time stopped the building of the Uganda railroad by their ravages among the workmen until they were finally shot by the engineer in eral men around a station on the railroad, carried off and ate the superintendent of the division. The latter had come down in his private car,

up at a window that night to watch for the lion. But he fell asleep, and the lion climbed on the platform, entered the car by the door and carried

In the summer of 1909 a couple of

Mr. Arthur Broome, in "The Logrolling Stone," says that in 1871 engaged in wood engraving for when one day, at the end of the short of money, he stood gazing at the cherries on a coster's barrow which stood abreast of the London Telegraph office, arrested the attention of a man whom he had often seen before, though not at midday.

a kindly deed was done. The man, averting his gaze from me, purchased two paper bags of fruit. Then, placing one of in the pocket of his capacious coat, he turned to me with the smile imaginable and without offering the other one to me, I gratefully accepted. He then on and went upstairs to the office of the newspaper. That was my introduction to the prince of four-George Augustus Sala.

the lion climbed on the platform, entered the car by the door and carried off his would be slayer through the window.

In the summer of 1900 a couple of men eating lions took to infesting the Masai villages on the plain around the headwaters of the Guaso Nyiro, west of Kenya, and by their ravages forced the Masai to abandon the district, and the native travel routes across it were also temporarily closed. A few weeks later I was hunting in the district. We kept the thorn boma around our camp closed at night, with a fire burning and askaris on guard, and were not molested.

Near Machakosboma a white traveler was taken out of his tent by a man eater one night a good many years ago. A gruesome feature of the incident was that on its first attempt the lion was driven off after having seized and wounded its victim. The wounds of the latter were dressed, and he was again put to bed, but soon after he had been left alone the lion again forced his way into the tent and this time carried the man off and ate him.

Every year in East Africa natives are carried off from their villages or from hunting camps by man eating lions. Occasionally one hears of man eating leopards, which usually confine themselves to women and children, and there are man eating hyenas, but the true man eaters of Africa are lions and crocodiles.—Theodore Roosevelt in Scribner's Magazine.

A Limit to His Power.

A curious historical anecdote is handed down from the time of James I. James, being in want of £20,000, applied to the corporation for a loan. The corporation refused. The king insisted. "But, sire, you cannot compel us," said the lord mayor. "No," exclaimed James, "but I'll ruin you and the city forever. I'll remove my courts of law, my court itself and my parliament to Winchester or to Oxford and make a desert of Westminster, and then think what will become of you!" "May it please your majesty," replied the lord mayor, "you are at liberty to remove yourself and your courts to wherever you please; but, sire, there will always be one consolation to the merchants of London—your majesty cannot take the Thames along with you."

True Kindergarten Spirit.

Master Harold had returned after his first day at a kindergarten school, says the Manchester Guardian.

"Well, Harold," said a friend of his mother who was calling, "how do you like school? I suppose you are the youngest there."

"Oh, no," said Harold indignantly drawing himself to his full height and throwing out his chest—"oh, no! Some of our chaps come in perambulators."

with similar background. While focusing take care to mark out what will be the bottle's boundaries on the plate by fixing little pieces of gummed paper to the ground glass screen of the camera. Then get your man to stand or sit in a chair upon a black cloth with a smooth black curtain behind him. Focus upon him so that he falls within the boundaries of the bottle, this being easily managed by means of the gummed paper guides. Finally expose the plate which has already been used to photograph the bottle, and when this is developed your friend will duly appear—inside.

This method will be found in practice to explain many pictures which at first seem very astonishing. To make a "vision fake" arrange a little scene, such as a bare room with an empty hearth, with your model sitting listlessly in the foreground. Make your first exposure on this scene, being careful to mark out on the ground glass screen the space into which the vision must fall. A dark curtain or dark woodwork should occupy this space in the first picture. Now procure a sheet of dead black paper, mount it evenly upon stiff card and with a little Chinese white sketch out an appropriate vision.

If you cannot do this yourself get an artist friend to help you, but see that the sketch is placed in the correct spot—i. e., the spot which you have arranged for it to occupy in the finished picture. When the sketch is finished set it up before the camera, focus and see that it falls within the required boundary upon the screen. Then expose again the plate which has already done duty and—if no miscalculations have been made—an interesting "vision" picture will result.

The ghost "fake" may be made in exactly the same way, only in this case an appropriate scene would be a deserted churchyard, with your model posing in an awestruck attitude beside a tomb. In all photographs of this kind the reader should bear in mind that a dead black background does not appreciably affect the sensitized plate, but a show plate should be used whenever this is possible, as by this means any slight tendency to "fog" will be obviated.—Scientific American.

Plain Talk From Home.

"I ought to be supremely happy," the youth wrote to the home people. "I don't see much business ahead, but I have my diploma and my books."

Whereupon the "old man" wrote him:

"Put the diploma in a frame, make a pillow of the books, then rise up early and hit some good hard licks for three square meals a day."—Atlanta Constitution.

Cleanse the System

But no human can think of the distance expressed by the 1's. Let the first row of figures extend twenty-five trillion or fifty or a thousand trillion miles to the east; then a row could be extended toward the west. Many millions of years would be required to write the long rows. Suppose that you write 9's both ways during a thousand million years each. Then the distance in miles would be thinner than a spider's thread when compared to an infinite distance.

There are possibly fifty persons now living able to think one new thought. They are the mighty of the earth, and are all transcendent mathematicians. Not one of these even tries to begin to think of infinity or eternity. They all know better. Only the superficial strive to think of the two words, so my questioner must answer his own question, for I cannot even hope to secure a glimpse, lasting a thousandth part of one second, of the meaning of one of the following list of words: Mind, space, time, duration, infinity, eternity, beginning, end, space and electrons.—Edgar Lucien Larkin in New York American.

FOUR SOULS EACH.

Curious Beliefs of the Savages of West Africa.

West African religion is particularly generous to the human beings, to each of whom it allots several souls, four being the usual number. Only one is immortal, however. The others, though troublesome enough during the owner's life, cease to be at the same time as the body. They are the shadow soul, the dream soul and the bush soul.

One soul seems more than many of us can manage, but the poor African has a bad time between the four of them. He never knows when some enemy may plunge a knife into his shadow, thus causing him to sicken and die, or when his bush soul, which takes the form of an animal, may rush into danger and get hurt, and, as for his dream soul, that is particularly troublesome, as it wanders from his body during sleep and runs the risk of being caught by witch traps. When this happens its place is often taken by a nasty stranger spirit called a "sisa," which seems to have no other object but to cause misfortune and sickness to the being who forms its temporary habitation.

Most of the tribes have the idea of an underworld after death, neither heaven nor hell, but much like the existing world, only dimmer. Among the Tschwi tribes this idea is well defined. Their shadow world has a name—srahmandayi—and they even know the way to the entrance, which is across the Volta river. This place has its markets, its town and its interests, but everything is felt in a more indistinct way.

Meat For Jurymen.

At one time it was the common duty of both the plaintiff and defendant in an action to provide refreshments for the jury empaneled to try it, and from this arose the practice (which survived until 1870) of denying them "meat, drink or fire" while deliberating upon their verdict. Later on it became usual for the person in whose favor the verdict was given to offer the jury a dinner and sometimes a guinea—or so for their trouble. This practice led to so much abuse that it was found necessary to pass a law prohibiting it.—London Graphic.

Re-opening Services in St. Andrew's next Sunday morning (11 o'clock) and evening 7 o'clock. The Methodist churches have been kindly thoughtful in giving way one service in each church. That St. Andrew's may accommodate the people we would suggest that visitors from the Methodist Churches attend according to arrangements made by their pastors. Hay Bay Presbyterian congregation is specially invited to visit and worship with us. (See church notes.) The alterations and extensions of our building have cost considerable money. Have You
Made Up Your Mind
To Buy a Piano?

Then you should know more about pianos in general, and the New Scale Williams in particular. Our booklets give this information and we send them free.

They tell how the ideal piano should be built—how wood should be seasoned and finished—how all the parts should be fashioned and put together—how tone, volume, sweetness and power are produced. And they tell how the New Scale Williams Piano IS BUILT.

Read these booklets and you will want to see the New Scale Williams. Examine this piano—play it—and you won't be satisfied with any other.

The New Scale Williams Pianos

are masterpieces—musically and mechanically. The longest strings to a given scale, the largest sound board and most powerful action, are combined in the New Scale Williams to secure the greatest power and volume. The tone has a purity, richness and singing quality that delight the cultivated musical ear.

The sweetness and mellowness of tone depend much on the felt hammers which strike the strings. If the felt is too soft—the tone is muffled and blurred—if too hard, the notes are metallic and harsh. In the New Scale Williams, the hammers are covered with two thicknesses of pure wool felt: that is why the New Scale Williams keeps its beautiful tone year after year. Our booklets explain the construction of New Scale Williams from the time the wood comes from far away Spain, Brazil and the West Indies, until the piano leaves the factory. They are wonderfully interesting and worth reading by any one intending to purchase a piano.

Then there is our Easy Payment Plan—which enables every home in Canada to have one of these magnificent instruments.

DISTRIBUTION OF SEED GRAIN AND POTATOES FROM THE DOMINION EXPERIMENTAL FARM 1913-1914.

By instructions of the Hon. Minister of Agriculture a distribution of superior sorts of grain and potatoes will be made during the coming winter and spring to Canadian farmers. The samples for general distribution will consist of spring wheat (5 lbs.), white oats (4 lbs.), barley (5 lbs.) and field peas (5 lbs.). These will be sent out from Ottawa. A distribution of potatoes (in 3 lb. samples) will be carried on from several of the experimental farms, the Central Farm at Ottawa supplying only the provinces of Ontario and Quebec. All samples will be sent free, by mail. Applicants must give particulars in regard to the soil on their farms, and some account of their experience with such kinds of grain, (or potatoes) as they have grown, so that a promising sort for their conditions may be selected. Each application must be separate and must be signed by the applicant. Only one sample of grain and one of potatoes can be sent to each farm. Applications on any kind of printed form cannot be accepted. If two or more samples are asked for in the letter only one will be sent. As the supply of seed is limited, farmers are advised to apply early; but the applications will not necessarily be filled in the exact order in which they are received. Preference will always be given to the most thoughtful and explicit requests. Applications received after the end of January will probably be too late. All applications for grain (and applications for potatoes) should be addressed to the Dominion Cerealists, Central Experimental Farm, Ottawa. Such applications require no postage. If otherwise addressed delay and disappointment may occur. Applications for potatoes, from farmers in any other province, should be addressed (postage prepaid) to the Superintendent of the nearest Branch in that Province. J. H. GRIDDALE, Director, Dominion Experimental Farms. A SCHOOL TEACHER'S ENTERPRISE. One of the most interesting letters recently received by the Dairy Commissioner, Ottawa, is from a school teacher in Alberta, who asks for milk record forms and literature on the subject of cow testing, because—now listen: Some of the boys in the school are starting a contest in recording the production of individual cows to last one year. This opens up a most promising field for every school teacher and for thousands of boys in our country school. In this we would be following somewhat slowly to the wake of many schools in the United States and New Zealand where the use of the Babcock milk tester has been taught for some time. In a dairy country like this, we should be out blazing trail for other teachers and boys to follow. No better work could be taken up by such lads, for any record work of that kind must infallibly lead to better, vastly better, conditions on dairy farms. Probably these Alberta lads will soon be excellent dairymen obtaining seventy five or one hundred dollars per cow. Needless to say the Dairy Division will be only too ready to supply blank forms and instructions in all such

A MURDERED RACE MURDERER TO DIE Greatest Criminal of All History Will Soon Meet His Fate.

Jesus Charged With Murder—Adam and His Race Victims—The Murderer at Large Six Thousand Years—He Has Added Insult to Injury—He Has Made Us Believe Our Best Friend Caused Race Ruin

PASTOR-RUSSELL

Washington, D. C., November 16. —Pastor Russell gave two addresses here to-day. We report one from the text, "He (Satan) was a murderer from the beginning, and abode not in the truth. When he speaketh a lie, he speaketh of his own; for he is a liar, and the father of it."—John 8:44.

The Pastor began his sermon by drawing a comparison between conditions in Heaven and those on earth. Then he asked, Why should God have done so differently with two creations—men and angels—His own children? The Bible, said he, explains the reason for this difference of treatment. The human family became sinners, through the disobedience of Father Adam. The entire Adamic race is impaired mentally, morally, and physically, as a result of the curse, or penalty of sin—"Dying, thou shalt die."

Satan the Murderer.

Then the Pastor demonstrated from Scripture that Satan was the murderer of our race, as Jesus declared. Satan persuaded Mother Eve that God, who cannot lie, had lied to her; that the declaration, "Dying, thou shalt die," is an untruth; that man could not die; that he had some inherent life which even God could not destroy. He further persuaded her that God had a selfish motive in telling the lie; that God wished to keep them in ignorance. Then Satan declared that by obeying him they would become like God. The death sentence was carried out. Our first parents were driven from Eden, that they might no longer have access to the life-sustaining fruits, that they might come under the penalty. There never was a sentence, Thou shalt live in eternal torment and be tortured by devils. All such misrepresentations are slanders intended to dishonor God and to turn men's hearts from Him.

The murdered race now numbers about twenty thousand million souls. Has God no gracious provision for them? asked the speaker. He then answered his own question my numerous Scriptures assuring us that God so loved the world as not to wish them to perish like brute beasts. He therefore gave His Son, that all exercising obedient faith in Him might attain everlasting life. The Pastor next explained that a savior is a life-giver. Adam failed to give his race life. What we need is what he lost—life. This God has provided through His Son. Salvation is a raising from death to life—resurrection. The resurrection will not be merely an awakening from the tomb to the conditions prevailing before death. Adam's dying began when he was perfect, and included all the processes

IDENTIFYING DEAD SOLDIERS.

Many Methods Adopted by Various Countries.

Turkey is the only European country which takes practically no trouble
to see that its soldiers killed in war shall be identified. Every other country makes its fighters carry "identity disks," "cards," or in some other way provides that its dead soldiers will be recognized.

Each Bulgarian soldier, for instance, carries no fewer than six identification plates, each of which has on it his name, number and corps. These plates each man is directed to fix away
in various parts of his clothing, so that however badly he may be wounded, there will be at least one plate by which he can be identified.

It is because of the terrible effects of modern artillery fire that soldiers
should carry several means of identification if killed. During the Boer war, for example, soldiers had an identification card sewn into some portion of their clothing.

After Spion Kop no trace could be found of Capt. Hicks, of the Lancashire Fusiliers, and for months he was supposed to be in the hands of the Boers. It transpired, however, that he had been blown almost literally to atoms by the explosion of a shell and his identification card destroyed.

The vast majority of the hundreds of thousands of Japanese and Russians killed in the Russo-Japanese war were identified. After the battle of Sha-ho river, for example, over 13,000 Russian dead were buried by the Japanese, practically everyone being recognized by means of the little metal ikons, or sacred picture images found on the bodies. On the back of these ikons was stamped the name,
regiment and rank of the wearer.

Each Japanese soldier carried a tiny aluminum tag worn inside the waist-belt and bearing a number corresponding with his number in the regimental list. So terrible was the fighting and so many soldiers were literally blown to bits by hand-grenades that orders were issued that the tags should be placed inside the soles of the boots. It was found that even if a shell actually struck a man and blew him to atoms his boots were always found intact.

Germany, like Bulgaria, has more than one way of identifying its dead
after a big battle. Each soldier carries three metal discs about the size of a half-crown, stamped with his number and corps. One disc is sewn inside the collar of the great-coat, another in the waist-band of the trousers, and the third in the heel of the right boot.

How well this system works was shown at Vionville and Gravelotte,
two of the worst battles of the war of 1870. These battles were fought in front of Metz on Aug. 16 and 18, the Germans losing over 40,000 officers and men. Yet complete casualty lists were received in Berlin two days later.

If Austria does decide to fight, her soldiers will be recognized by an elaborate brass locket which each one wears. This locket contains a number of leaves of parchment on which are written full particulars of the owner,
his name, age, date of enlistment, the town or village where his home is and other particulars.

The Pastor next explained that a savior is a life-giver. Adam failed to give his race life. What we need is what he lost—life. This God has provided through His Son. Salvation is a raising from death to life—resurrection.

The resurrection will not be merely an awakening from the tomb to the conditions prevailing before death.
Adam's dying began when he was perfect, and included all the processes
which finally led him to the tomb.
His resurrection will be his raising again to what he lost through sin—
to what was redeemed at Calvary.
This principle holds with all his children.

The Resurrection will include all mankind, with two exceptions. The first will be those who refuse to cooperate with God in loving righteousness and hating iniquity. The other will be the Church of this Gospel Age
—saints of all nations and denominations. These will share in the First Resurrection and be made perfect on the Heavenly plane, to be associated with their Master in blessing humanity.

Satan the In-corrigeble.

Then Pastor Russell carefully traced Satan's career of enmity toward God and righteousness for the past six thousand years, as recorded in Scripture. The fact that the Almighty has permitted Satan to remain at large and to some extent practice evil assures us that Divine Wisdom foresees some good result therefrom. In the sight of the holy angels, Satan's vicious, scheming, lying, murderous spirit is fully manifest. Soon all mankind, now subject to his decep-tions, will be fully informed respecting them.

Unable to seduce our Redeemer to disloyalty to God, Satan sought to put Him to ignominious death, only to find that he had fulfilled the Scriptures. Later, in persecuting the Church and introducing damnable heresies, through seducing spirits inculcating "doctrines of demons,"
he has sought to mislead all respecting the Divine character and plan.

A time has been fixed for this great murderer's execution. But first he must witness the undoing of all his work—the honor assigned the Logos, who humbled Himself to become man's Redeemer.

Satan will be bound during the thousand years of Messiah's Reign.
At the end of that period he will be loosed, to test mankind, then perfect in the flesh. This test will demonstrate who will be worthy of the gift of life everlasting.

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, Nov. 17.—At the Montreal
Stock Yards west end market, offerings
today amounted to 2900 cattle, 600 sheep
and lambs, 1000 hogs and 800 calves.

A feature of the trade today was the stronger feeling in the market for common cattle, and prices as compared with a week ago show an advance of 20c to 40c per 100 pounds. The better grades of cattle were unchanged in price. Common bulls were active, and sales of round lots were made at $4.40 to $4.60, and culling cows at $3.40 to $3.50 per 100 pounds. A new departure in the trade was the demand from American buyers for milch cows and springers. Butchers' cattle were fairly active, there being a good demand for small lots to fill actual wants.

Owing to the small supplies of lambs coming forward for the season of the year and the keen competition between buyers for the same, the undertone to the market continues strong, and prices have scored another advance of 25c per 100 pounds. The trade was active, and sales of western stock were made at $7.50 to $7.75, and eastern at $7 to $7.25 per 100 pounds. There was no further change in sheep, but prices were firm, with a good demand for ewes at $4.75 to $5 per 100 pounds. Grass-fed calves brought 4½c to 4¼c, and milk-fed 5½c to 7½c.

A stronger feeling developed in the market for hogs today, and prices advanced 10c per 100 pounds.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.50 to $7.75;
do., medium, $6.50 to $7; do., common, $5
to $5.75; canners, $3.40 to $3.50; butchers'
cattle, choice cows, $6.25 to $6.50; do.,
bulls, $4.50 to $6; milkers, choice, each, $85 to $90; do., common and medium,
each, $75 to $80; springers, $65 to $70.

Sheep, ewes, $4.75 to $5; bucks and
culs, $4.25 to $4.50; lambs, $7 to $7.75.
Hogs, f.o.b., $9.35 to $9.60.

Calves, $5 to $15.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

CHICAGO, Nov. 17.—Cattle—Receipts, 6000; market steady. Beeves, $6.65 to $9.55; Texas steers, $6.50 to $7.60; stockers and feeders, $4.80 to $7.50; cows and heifers, $3.20 to $5.10; calves, $6.50 to $10.75.

Hogs—Receipts, 48,000; market weak;
light, $7.40 to $7.90; mixed, $7.40 to $8;
heavy, $7.30 to $8; rough, $7.30 to $7.45;
pigs, $5 to $7.10; bulk of sales, $7.60 to $7.90.

Sheep and Lambs—Receipts, 45,000;
market lower; native, $3.75 to $4.75; yearlings, $5 to $5.75. Lambs, native, $5.50 to $7.

A CLEVER SWINDLE

Working the Game at an English
Watering Place.

STORY OF A WORRIED WOMAN.

It Caught the Interest and Sympathy of the Prosperous Loungers at the Fashionable Hotel, and the Rest of the Scheme Was Easy.

"The prosperous" were lounging on the terrace of the leading hotel in the fashionable watering place sunning themselves. It was a magnificent afternoon. Everybody was lazily good tempered and contributed to the general air of well fed contentment. And then "the woman" put in an appearance.

For a moment she stood on the stone steps that led up to the terrace, hesitating. "The prosperous" gaped at her and wondered why she was there. They probably classified her as one of the "respectable poor."

"The woman" could not disguise the fact that she was in trouble of some sort. She advanced upon "the prosperous" and glanced timidly from face to face. Then, gathering her courage in both hands, she walked right past them into the vestibule of the hotel.

A little buzz of speculation arose. There was no doubt about it. They found "the woman" interesting.

"Wonder what's worrying her?" said one.

"Perhaps she thinks of putting up and is a bit doubtful about the cuisine," cackled a would be wit. The cold stare with which his remark was received told him that it was considered to be in decidedly bad taste. As a fact, "the prosperous" were inclined to feel sympathy for "the woman." They had been well fed, and it was a magnificent afternoon; also they were genuinely curious.

Soon she came out again, looking more dejected than ever. She looked around as if for a less public means of escape, but, finding none, strode desperately forward.

"My good woman, you seem to be in trouble. Can I do anything?"

It was the elderly military looking man in the corner who spoke—spoke gruffly as one who is in the habit of doing favors ungraciously. "The prosperous" thought it a trifle daring. But they were secretly glad. And they listened.

"No, sir, thank you," replied "the woman."

And then she belled her words by a muffled sob.

"I—I—It's nothing, sir—nothing at all," she added.

The military looking man rose from his seat.

"Have the goodness to take that chair," he said peremptorily, "and tell us the truth. I have no doubt that we shall be able to assist you."

When she had partly composed herself "the woman" stammered out her story, with the aid of much prompting from her companion.

"I am a widow, a color sergeant in the Welsh Grays my husband was. I let lodgings in the town. There was a

It was on Aug. 8, 1815, that "the general" Bonaparte, as his Englishers insisted upon calling him transferred from the Bellerophon the ship Northumberland, to beg journey to St. Helena. There much protest in England against transportation of the distinguished prisoner, but the government reu firm.

Official England could see no but danger in keeping such a dy force as Napoleon within its and, harsh as the actions of the government seemed, the position then was not without logic. Napoleon had been placed on his honor at but honor did not weigh with when ambition was concerned.

Charles Lamb spoke for those favored Napoleon's detention in land when he wrote to Southey:

er all, Bonaparte is a fine fellow my barber says, and I should not standing bareheaded at his tal do service to him in his fall. should have given him Hampton of Kensington, with a tether extending forty miles round London," whimsically suggested that if Napoleon remained in England the might some day eject the Brun in his favor, and the government the suggestion seriously.

Now that Napoleon is safely such a fear seems absurd, but Napoleon was then alive, and, in view of that fact, no government was saying, "I should worry!"—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

MATTHEW RYAN,
Warden.

W. J. SHANNON,
Treasurer County of Lennox and Addington

County Treasurer's Office, Napanee, July 31st, 1913.

First published in THE NAPANEE EXPRESS, at Napanee, in the County of Lennox and Addington, on August 22nd, 1913.

"Why is he so bitter at the truth. I have no doubt that we shall be able to assist you."

When she had partly composed herself "the woman" stammered out her story, with the aid of much prompting from her companion.

"I am a widow, a color sergeant in the Welsh Grays my husband was. I let lodgings in the town. There was a gentleman called Colonel Morrish boarded in my house nigh on six months; said he'd pay me as soon as his dividends or somethin' came in at the half year.

"I managed to hold out and gave him the good table as he was accustomed to, though it meant owing the landlord. But I'd do anything to have the gentry in my house."

"The prosperous" murmured sympathetically.

"Just before the six months was up he said he'd have to come an' stay at this hotel to meet one of the directors who was going to pay him his money. An' now they tell me that there never was no one here by the name of Colonel Morrish. And—and—the bailiffs come into my house this mornin', an' they'll take all my furniture for the £12 I owe the landlord."

"Twelve pounds!" repeated the military looking man. He hesitated and then fumbled in his pocket. "Well, dash it, here is £2 toward it." And his voice was gruffer than ever.

He glared fiercely at the meek little man by his side, who promptly began the fumbling process to cover his confusion.

Others fumbled, too, and at the end of a couple of minutes the £12 was there.

"I—I—can't take it, sir. / I—"

"Madam, don't talk like a fool!" thundered the military looking man. "Run home and pay out those—bailiffs."

.....

Late that evening in a room in the poorer quarters of the town "the woman" was fingering the sovereigns.

"That's ten quid to the good, anyhow!" she said complacently. "Where shall we try next?"

"Don't know, old girl. But I was thinking of Brighton."

It was the military looking man who answered.—London Answers.

Appropriate.

"Did you hear that that poor fellow who lost both his legs in an automobile accident intends to go into politics?"

"No. How can he without a leg to stand on?"

"Oh, he expects to go on the stump."

"Judge."

Testing His Faith.

Uncle—Well, Bobby, what did you learn at school today? Bobby—I learned that the world is round and turns on hinges, like that globe in the library. Uncle—Well, what do you think of that? Bobby—I think, uncle, they are asking me to believe a good deal for a small boy.—St. Paul Pioneer-Press.

Insult to Injury.

"Mrs. Wombat is highly indignant."

"Her house was robbed, I hear."

"Yes, and the next night the burglars brought back her silver plated ware."—Pittsburgh Post.

Pleasures make one soft and lazy, but not happiness. Happiness is as bracing as sea air.

TAIN FEARED NAPOLEON.

Lamb, Who Thought Him a Fine Fellow, Fanned the Flame.
was on Aug. 8, 1815, that "Gen. Bonaparte, as his English captives insisted upon calling him, was referred from the Bellerophon to ship Northumberland, to begin the way to St. Helena. There was a protest in England against the transportation of the distinguished guer, but the government remained cial England could see nothing longer in keeping such a dynamic as Napoleon within its limits, harsh as the actions of the government seemed, the position thus taken was not without logic. Napoleon, been placed on his honor at Elba, honor did not weigh with him. ambition was concerned.

aries Lamb spoke for those who red Napoleon's detention in England. he wrote to Southey: "Aft- l, Bonaparte is a fine fellow, as arber says, and I should not mind ling bareheaded at his table to ervice to him in his fall. They ld have given him Hampton court ensington, with a tether extending miles round London." Lamb isically suggested that if Napo- remained in England the people t some day eject the Brunswick s favor, and the government took uggestion seriously.

w that Napoleon is safely dead a fear seems absurd, but Napo- was then alive, and, in view of fact, no government was safe in g. "I should worry!"—Cleveland Dealer.

BROKEN ENGLISH.

Wrestling Match a Frenchman Had With One Little Verb.

He was a hard working and intelli- gent Frenchman, but the verbs still troubled him.

"Ah, yes, m'sieur, I saw Mrs. Brown the other day," he said to an English friend, "and she told—I mean, told— me that her school was soon to break down."

"Break up, surely?"
"Ah, yes, break up! Your verbs do trouble me so yet! Break up—that was it!"

"Why was she going to let her school break up so early?"

"Because influenza had broken down in it."

"Broken out. It is a bit puzzling. Isn't it?"

"Broken out—ah, yes! And she is going to leave the house in charge of a caretaker, as she fears it might be broken— How do I say that, please?"

"Broken into, I expect."

"That is it. Broken into—by the burglars."

"Is her son married yet?"

"No; the engagement is broken in."

"Broken off. Oh, I hadn't heard of that! Is she worried about it?"

"He only broke up the news to her last week. Is that right?"

"No; you should say just 'broke' there."

"Ah, vell; I think I am nearly broke myself by those verbs of yours!"

And he went sadly on his way.— Pearson's Weekly.

Food and Its Flavor.

In a plea for better food in America —really pure food, better cooked—the Journal of the American Medical Association calls on doctors and nurses to make the subject "of serious national import." "We cook food for at least four reasons," says the Journal, "to sterilize it, to make it nutritious, to render it more easily digestible and to improve or vary its flavor. The last of these is at least as important as any of the others. When the gustatory nerves tingle in response to the stimulus of some rare condiment or aroma the saliva flows in joyous excitement, and the digestive juices, by whose benign influences food is transformed into nourishment, respond in salutary and fullest measure. The simple and pleasant way to bring this about is to pay proper attention to the flavor of food."

McINTOSH BROS.

The Siege of The Seven Suitors

By
MEREDITH NICHOLSON

Copyright, 1910, by Meredith Nicholson

Cecilia sat where I had left her, and at first glance I thought she was reading. But, she turned quickly as I crossed the room. She held in her hand an oblong silver trinket not larger than a card case. A short pencil similar to those affixed to dance cards was attached to it by a slight cord, and she had, I inferred, been making a notation of some kind on a leaf of the silver bound booklet. Even after she had looked up and smiled at me her eyes sought the page before her. Then she closed the covers and clasped the pretty toy in her hand. As though to divert my attention she resorted at once to the chimney in a vein of light irony.

"You see," she said, "there is ample reason for your remaining here. You would hardly find anywhere else so interesting a test of your professional powers as Hopefield Manor offers. The house is haunted beyond question, and I can see that you are not a man to leave two defenseless women to the mercy of a ghost who drops down chimneys at will."

I suffered her chaff for several minutes, then I asked point blank:

"Pardon me, but have you the slightest idea that Miss Octavia is behind this? It is not possible that she was responsible last night. But she was not on this floor awhile ago when the smoke poured in here. I should be glad to hear your opinion."

"I saw that you suspected her before you left the room, Mr. Ames, and I must say that the idea is in no way creditable to you. If you entertain such a suspicion you must supply a motive, and just what motive would you attribute to my Aunt Octavia in this instance?"

Her tone and manner pliqued me or I should not have answered as I did.

"It is possible," I said, "that some of these gentlemen who came here tonight were not to her liking, and it may have occurred to her to get rid of them by the obviously successful method of smoking them out."

She rose, still clasping the little silver backed notebook, and looked me over with amusement in her face and eyes.

"You are almost too ingenious, Mr. Ames. I hope that by breakfast time you will have some more plausible solution of the problem. Good night."

And so, tightly clasping the little book, she left the room. I followed her to the door, and at the turn of the stair she glanced down and nodded. Her face as it hung above me for an

States, and there aren't any majesty's soldiers to deal with. You forget that you're not in England now."

"But this 'ere country used to be Henglish, you may recall, sir. The story the coachman got bin the village goes back to the hold times, sir, when the colonies was bin rebellion, if I may so call hit, sir, and 'is majesty's troops was puttin' down the rebellion bin these parts. Some American rebels chased a British soldier from bover near White Plains to these 'ere woods as they was then, and they 'aunted 'im, sir, right where this 'ere 'ouse stands, if I may make so free."

"You'd better go to bed, James. And don't encourage talk among the other servants about this ghost. I know something about the building of houses, and I'll give these walls a good looking over. Good night."

I made myself comfortable for an hour, smoking a cigar over an article on English politics, and while I read a big log placidly burned itself to ashes. I found the switch and snapped out the library lights. When I had gained the second floor I turned off the lights in the hall below, and, as I looked down the well to make sure I had turned the right key, the third floor lights suddenly died and I was left in darkness. This was the least bit disconcerting. I was quite sure that the upper lights had remained burning brightly after the darkening of the lower hall, so that it was hardly possible that the one switch had cut off both lights.

Standing by the rail that guarded the well, I peered upward, thinking that some one above me was manipulating another switch, but the silence was as complete as the blackness. I was about to turn from the rail to the wall to find the switch, but at this moment, as my face was still lifted in the intentness with which I was listening, something brushed my cheek—something soft of touch and swift of movement. As I gripped the rail I felt this touch once, twice, thrice. Then my haste dropped the lid essential to ignition and stooped to find it.

The stair had narrowed on this flight, and as I sought with futile eagerness to regain the box lid I could have sworn that some one passed me. Still half stooping, I stretched out my arms and clasped empty air, and so suddenly had I thrown myself forward that I lost my balance and rolled downward the space of half a dozen treads before I recovered myself. I was badly scared and hardly less angry at having missed through my own clumsiness the joy of grappling with the ghost of one of King George's soldiers. But the matches having been lost in the pitch darkness of the stair, I could get my bearings again only by clinging to the stair rail until I found the second floor switch. I should say that two full minutes had passed between the loss of the matches and my flashing on of the lamps. From top to bottom the lights shone brightly. But no one was visible, and I heard no sound in any part of the house.

As I began to analyze my sensations during the temporary eclipse of the lights I was conscious of two things. The being, human or other, that had passed me had been light of step and fleet of motion. There had been something uncanny in the ease and speed of that passing. I was without conviction as to its direction, whether up or down, though I inclined to the former notion for the reason that the employment of a concealed switch above seemed the more reasonable argument. And a faint, an almost imperceptible scent, as of a flower, had seemed to be a part of the passing. Mine is a sensitive nostril, and I was confident that it did not betray me in this.

I gathered up my matches and started again for the roof. The trunk room door opened readily, as on my morning inspection of the chimney pots, but as I glanced up I saw that the hatch was open. Through the aper-

sure you, Mr. Ames, that it is on natural affection for a daughter led my father to seek me here in clandestine fashion."

Cecilia had spoken steadily, but voice broke as she concluded, and walked quickly toward the hatch. Her father stepped before me to her his hand through the opening.

I withdrew to the edge of the while a few words passed between them that seemed to be on his postulation and on hers a denial and plea. He passed her foils and masks, and she vanished whereupon he addressed himself to

"I had learned from both my daughters of your presence in my house, and I had expected to meet you sooner or later. This is a strange news, a strange business."

He had drawn out a pipe, which filled and lighted dexterously, flame of his match gave me better acquaintance with his face. He leaned against the serrated roof guard the greatest composure and drew pipe to a glow. I had not forgotten encounter with the ghost on the and as I waited for him to speak trying to identify him with the serious agency that had tampered the lights and passed so ghostly across my face in the stair we could hardly say that there had been time for either Bassford Hollister to have reached the roof after my experiences on the and yet they had been engaged so earnestly at the moment of my appeal at the hatchway that it was impossible that either could have played and flown to the roof before I reached it. And, eliminating the ghost altogether, I had yet to learn how Bassford Hollister had gained entrance to house. It seemed best to drop speculations and wait for him to declare self.

CHAPTER XI.

My Befuddlement Increases.

"YOU must understand, Mr. Ames, that my daughter and I both of them, are very fond of me," said Bassford Hollister. "It is the great grief of my life, owing to matters beyond my control, I have been unable to carry them as I should like to do. Thinking the case, I have been obliged to allow them to accept many favors from my only sister Octavia. This, in many circumstances, would not be so pugnant to my pride, but my sister is a very unusual person. She must have for my children in her own way, while I was prepared, in agreeing they should accept her bounty, some whimsical manifestation of her eccentric character. I did not imagine that she would go so far as to shut out from all knowledge of her father for them. That, Mr. Ames, is what has happened."

His voice rose and fell mournfully. He puffed his pipe for a moment and continued:

"There is now something for here which I do not understand. I have an idea that Octavia has conceived some preposterous scheme, choosing a husband for Cecilia, though in keeping with her odd fashion transacting all her business. I do know its nature, and by the terms her agreement Cecilia is not to close the method to be employed—me—not even to me, her own father."

"You are almost too ingenious, Mr. Ames. I hope that by breakfast time you will have some more plausible solution of the problem. Good night."

And so, tightly clasping the little book, she left the room. I followed her to the door, and at the turn of the stair she glanced down and nodded. Her face as it hung above me for an instant seemed transfigured with happiness.

CHAPTER X.

I Meet a Playful Ghost.

IT was not yet 10 o'clock, and I was dismayed at the thought of being left to my own devices in this big country house, at an hour when the task at the Hare and Tortoise usually became worth while. I sat down and began to turn over the periodicals on the library table, but I was in no mood for reading.

The butler appeared and offered me drink, but the thought of drinking alone did not appeal to me. I repelled the suggestion coldly, but after I had dropped my eyes to the English review I had taken up I was conscious that he stood his ground.

"Beg pardon, sir."

"Well?"

"Hit's a bit bod about the chimney, sir."

The professional man in me was at once alert. The chimney's conduct was inexplicable enough, but I was in no humor to brook the theories of a stupid servant. Still, he might know something, so I nodded for him to go on.

He glanced over his shoulder and came a step nearer.

"They say in the village, sir, that the ouse is 'aunted.'"

"Who say it, James?"

"The liveryman told the coachman, and the 'ousemaid got hit from a seamstress. Hit's werry queer, sir."

"Rubbish, James. I'm amazed that a person of your station should listen to a liveryman's gossip. There's the chimney, it's working perfectly. Some shift of air currents causes it to puff a little smoke into this room occasionally, but those things are not related to the supernatural. We'll find some way of correcting it in a day or two."

"Werry good, sir. But begging pardon, the chimney hain't hall. Hit walks, if I may so heexpress hit."

"Walks?" I exclaimed, sitting up and throwing down my review. "What walks?"

"You 'ear hit, sir, bin the walls. Hit goes right through the solid brick—most bunaccountable."

"You hear a mouse in the walls and think it's a ghost! But you forget James, that this is a new house, only a year or so old, and spooks don't frequent such places. If it were an old place it might be possible that the creaking of floors and the settling of walls would cause uneasiness in nervous people. The ghost tradition usually rests on some ugly fact. But here nothing of the kind is present."

"Hit was one of 'is majesty's horficers, sir," he answered hoarsely.

It flashed over me that this big stolid Yellow was out of his head; but sane or mad he was clearly greatly disturbed. It was best, I thought, or either hypothesis to speak to him peremptorily, and I rose, the better to deal with the situation.

"What nonsense is this you have in your head? You're in the United States, but the silence was as complete as the blackness. I was about to turn from the rail to the wall to find the switch, but at this moment, as my face was still lifted in the intentness with which I was listening, something brushed my cheek—something soft of touch and swift of movement. As I gripped the rail I felt this touch once, twice, thrice. Then my hand sought the wall madly, and with so bad an aim that it was quite a minute before I found the switch plate and snapped all the keys. The stair and the halls above and below me sprang into being again, and I stood blinking stupidly upward.

Though I was in a modern house thoroughly lighted by electricity I cannot deny that this incident, following so quickly upon the butler's story, occasioned a moment's acute hair raising, accompanied by an uncomfortable tremor of the legs. As already hinted I lay no claim to great valor. As for ghosts I am half persuaded of their existence, and, after witnessing a presentation of Hamlet, always feel that Shakespeare is as safe a guide in such matters as the destructive scientific critics.

There were various plausible explanations of the failure of the lights. Some switch that I did not know of, perhaps in the third floor hall, might have been turned, or the power house in the village might have been shifting dynamos. Either solution of the riddle was credible. But the ghostly touch on my face could not be accounted for so readily. Leaving the lights on, I continued to the third floor and examined the switch and sought in other ways to explain these phenomena. My composure returned more slowly than I care to confess, and I think it was probably in my mind that the ghost of King George's dead soldier might be lying in wait for me, but I saw and heard nothing. The doors of the unused chambers on the third floor were closed, and I did not feel justified in trying them. The servants were housed on this floor at the rear of the house, and a door that cut off their quarters proved on examination to be tightly locked.

The fourth floor was only a half story, used for storage purposes. The roof was gained, I recalled, by an iron ladder and a hatchway in a trunk room. I ran down to my room and found a candle, to be armed against any further fickleness of the lights, and set out for the fourth floor. I had changed my coat and with a couple of candles and a box of matches started for the roof. My courage had risen now, and I was ready for any further adventure that the night might hold for me. Miss Hollister and Cecilia were both in their rooms, presumably asleep. The servants doubtless had their doors barred against ghostly visitors, and the house was mine to explore as I pleased.

I think I was humming slightly as I mounted the stair, which, in keeping with the general luxuriousness that characterized the furnishing of the house, was thickly carpeted even to the fourth floor. I was slipping my hand along the rail and mounting, I dare say, a little jauntily as I screwed my courage to an unfamiliar notch when suddenly, midway of the first half and just before I reached the turn where the stair broke, the lights failed again with startling abruptness. This was carrying the joke pretty far, and instantly I clapped my hand to my pocket for the box of safety matches, dug it out and then in my ture shone the heavens, a square of stars and bright with the moon's radiance. Pocketing my matches, I ran nimbly up the ladder.

I had been surprised to find the hatch open, but it is not too much to say that I was greatly astonished by what I saw on the moon hooded roof. There, midway of a flat area that lay between the two larger chimney pots, two persons were intently engaged, not in ghostly promenading or posturing or even in audible conversation, but in a spirited bout with foils. I stood with head and shoulders thrust through the opening, staring at this unusual spectacle and not sure but that after all my eyes were tricking me.

"Touche!" It was a woman's voice, faint from breathlessness. She threw off her mask and dropped her foil and with a most human and feminine gesture put up her hands to adjust her hair. It was Cecilia Hollister in a short skirt and fencing coat!

Her opponent was a man, and as he, too, flung off his mask I saw that he was a gentleman of years. I was about to withdraw when the stranger swung round and saw me. His sudden exclamation caused the girl to turn, and as a reasonable frankness has always seemed to me essential to a nice discretion I crawled out on the roof.

"I beg your pardon, Miss Hollister, but if I had known you were here I should not have intruded. The vagaries of the library chimney have been on my mind, and I was about to have another peep into yonder pot."

She stood at her ease, with one hand resting lightly against the inexplicable chimney in question and still somewhat spent from her exercise.

"Father," she said, turning to the stranger who stood near, "this is Mr. Ames, who is Aunt Octavia's guest."

The light of the gibbous moon enabled to discern pretty clearly the form and features of Mr. Bassford Hollister. And I find, in looking over my notes, that I accepted as a matter of course the singular meeting with my hostess' brother. I had grown so used to the ways of the Hollisters I already knew that the meeting with another member of the family at 11 o'clock at night on the roof of this remarkable house gave me no great shock of surprise. He was tall, slender and dark, with fine eyes that suggested Cecilia's. His close trimmed beard was slightly gray, but he bore himself erect, and I had already seen that he was alert of arm and eye and nimble of foot.

"Father and I have fenced together for years," said Cecilia. "My sister Hezekiah does not care for the sport. As you have already seen that my Aunt Octavia is an unusual woman, given to many whims, I will not deny to you that at present my father is persona non grata in this house. I beg to assure you that nothing to his discredit or mine has contributed to that situation, nor can our meeting here tonight be construed as detrimental to him or to me. In meeting my father in this way I have in a sense broken faith with my Aunt Octavia, but I ashere which I do not understand have an idea that Octavia has ceded some preposterous scheme choosing a husband for Cecilia in keeping with her odd fash transacting all her business. I know its nature, and by the terms her agreement Cecilia is not to close the method to be employed—not even to me, her own! You must agree, Ames, that rather rubbing it in."

"But you don't assume that daughter is not to be a free agent in the matter? You don't believe some unworthy and improper to be forced upon her?"

"That, sir, is exactly what I believe. You will pardon me, but I for a moment believe that Miss Hollister would risk her niece's happiness to satisfy her own peculiar. Your sister is a shrewd woman and her heart, I am convinced, kindest. Among the suitors camped at the Prescott Arms must be some one whom your father approves, and I see no reason he should not ultimately be chosen. Now that you have brought the matter, I make free to say one of these suitors is an old friend of mine, Hartley Wiggins by name, and that he is a man of the character and a gentleman in the strictest sense."

He had been listening to me with the greatest composure, but at mention of Wiggins' name he started and nervously clutched my arm.

"That man may be all the say," he cried chokingly, "but he acted infamously toward both daughters. He is a rogue and a despicable fellow. He has flirted shamelessly with Hezekiah while some time pretending to be interested in Cecilia."

"But, my dear sir, is it not possible that you do him a great wrong if not by the other way round? Hezekiah is trifling with Wiggins' affections? He's a splendid fellow, Hartley Wiggins, but he's a slow, that's all. And between superb young women like daughters a man may be pardoned doubts and hesitation. The thing bound to straighten itself out."

He tossed his head impatiently. "Has it occurred to you that Octavia's interest in this Hartley Wiggins may be due to a trifling material fact?"

"Nothing beyond his indubitable eligibility."

"Then let me tell you what I suspect. Both his names contain seven letters. My sister is slightly crazy, as to the number seven. I saw you my belief that the fact that names contain seven letters is at the bottom of all this. Incredibly dear sir, but wholly possible."

"Then, such being the case doesn't she show her hand? You send conjecture far when you entertain so absurd an idea. You think my assumption true?" he asked eagerly.

"I certainly do, Mr. Hollister, as well as assure me that, as Wiggins is specially favored in the number of letters in his singularly prosaic unromantic name, it is Miss Hollister's plan to keep him dallying years."

He seized me by the arm and me back against the battlement stood off and eyed me fiercely.

"You speak of serving and of ser- vice! Will you tell me just why you are here and what brings you into this affair? What are you doing in my sister's house, where I have to come like a thief in the night to see one of my own children?"

I hastened to declare my profes- sion and that I had been summoned by Miss Hollister to examine her chimneys. I could not, however, tell him that until my arrival the chim- neys had behaved themselves admir- ably.

"You've admitted your friendship for this Wiggins person—that's enough," he said when I had con- cluded. "I advise you to leave the house at once. I tell you he's got to be eliminated from the situation. Understand that I do not threaten you with violence, but I will not promise to abstain from visiting heavy punishment upon that fellow. And you? A chimney doctor? I am a man of considerable knowledge of the world, and I say to you very can- didly that I don't believe there is any such profession."

"Then let me tell you," I replied, not without heat, "that I am a gradu- ate in architecture. I am your sis- ter's guest, and as she is perfectly competent to manage her own affairs I shall stay here as long as it please- her to ask me to remain. And now, one other matter. How did you gain this roof tonight, when by your own admission you are not on such terms with your sister as would justify you in entering it openly?"

The moonlight did not fail to con- vey the contempt in his face, but I thought he grinned as he answered quietly:

"You can't seem to understand, young man, that you are entitled to no explanation from me. You strike me as a singularly fresh young per- son. It would be a positive grief to me to feel that my conduct had dis- pleased you. And now, as the night grows chill, I shall beg you to pre- ceed me into the house by the way you came."

"But first," I persisted, "let me ask a question. It is possible that you yourself have some preference among your daughter's several suit- ors, Mr. Hollister. Would you ob- ject to telling me which one you would choose for Miss Cecilia?"

"Beyond question the man for Ce- cilia, if I have any voice in the mat- ter, is Lord Arrowood."

"Arrowood!" I exclaimed. "You surprise me greatly. I saw him at the inn, and he seemed to me the most insignificant and uninteresting one of the lot."

"That proves you a person of poor gifts of discernment, Mr. Ames." And his tone and manner were quite reminiscent of his sister's ways, and his further explanation proved him even more worthily the brother of his sister.

"As I was obliged," he began, "ow- ing to an unfortunate physical handi- cap, to abandon my art, that of a ma- rine painter, I have given my atten- tion for a number of years to the study of the Irish situation. as I found the lights on. And I ac- quit you of rapping, rapping at my chamber door. It gives me the great- est satisfaction to assume that the house is haunted, and at an time you find the ghost I beg that you will lose no time in presenting me."

She wore a remarkable lavender dressing gown and a nightcap such as I had never seen outside a mu- seum. As she concluded her speech, spoken in that curious lifting tone which from the beginning had left me in doubt as to the seriousness of all her statements, she rose and, still clasping her magazine, made me a courtesy and was soon mounting the stair.

I heard her door close a minute later, and then, feeling that I had earned the right to repose, I went to my room and to bed.

I slept late and on going down found the table set in the breakfast room. Miss Octavia entered briskly, her slight figure concealed by a pro- digious gingham apron.

"Good morning, merry gentleman," she began blithely. "The most de- lightful thing has happened. With- out the slightest warning, without the faintest intimation of their dis- satisfaction, the house servants have departed, with the single exception of my personal maid, who, being a Swede, and therefore singularly de- void of emotion, was unshaken by the ghost rumors that have sent the rest of my staff scampering over the hills."

She lighted the coffee machine lamp in her most tranquil fashion and begged me to be seated.

"I have already breakfasted," she continued, "and Cecilia is even now preparing you an omelet with her own hand. I beg to reassure you as my guest that the departure of the servants causes me not the slightest annoyance. Cecilia is an excellent cook, and I myself shall not starve so long as I have strength to crack an egg or lift a stove lid. And be- sides, I still retain my early trust in Providence. I do not doubt that be- fore nightfall a corps of excellent servants will again be on duty here. Very likely they are even now bound for this place, coming from the wet coasts of Ireland, from Liverpool and the lonely villa in Scandinavia. I hope you will testify to the fact that I faced this day in the cheeriest and most hopeful spirit."

"Not only shall I do so, Miss Hol- lister," I replied, trying to catch her own note, "but it will throughout my life give me the greatest satisfaction to see your cause right. To that ex-

house he must know whether he had contrived any secret passages that would afford exits and entrances not apparent to the eye. It would be an easy matter to run into the city, ex- plain myself to my assistant and get hold of Pepperton. My mind was made up, and I had even consulted a time table and chosen one of the ex- press trains.

CHAPTER XII.

I Play Truant.

As I sat at the table absorbed in my plans for the day my nerves re- ceived a sudden shock. I had heard no one enter, yet a voice at my shoul- der murmured casually:

"Hast thou seen ghosts? Hast thou at midnight heard?"

It was the voice of Hezekiah. I knew before I faced her. She wore a blue sailor waist, with a broad red ribbon tied under the collar, and a blue tam-o'-shanter capped her head. She bore a tray that contained my omelet, a plate of toast and other sundries incidental to a substantial breakfast, which she distributed deftly upon the table.

"How did you get here?" I blurted, my nerves still out of control.

"The kitchen door, sir. I had rid- den into the garden, and, seeing Aunt Octavia heading for the stables and Cecilia at the kitchen window, I pedaled boldly in. Cecilia wanted to borrow my bicycle, and, being a good little sister, I gave it to her. She also said that you required food, so I told her to go and I would carry you your breakfast. I shall skip myself in a minute. You may draw your own coffee. Mind the machine. It tips if you are not careful."

She went to the window and peered out toward the stables.

"May I ask, daughter of kings, where your sister has gone so sud- denly?"

"Certainly! She's off for town to chase a cook and a few other people to run this hotel. I heard at the post- office that the whole camp had desert- ed, so I ran over to see what was do- ing. And just for that I've got to walk home."

"But your aunt said that Provi- dence would take care of the servant question. She expected a whole corps of ideal servants to come straying in during the day."

"Cecilia hasn't Aunt Octavia's con- fidence in Providence, so she's taking a shot at the employment agencies. She has left a note on the kitchen table to inform Aunt Octavia that she had forgotten an engagement with the dentist and has gone to catch the 10:18."

"That, Hezekiah, is a lie. It isn't quite square to deceive your aunt that way," I remarked soberly.

Hezekiah laughed.

"You absurdity! Don't you know Aunt Octavia yet? She will be per-study of the Irish situation. I met the true Hollister touch.

"And so," Bassford Hollister concluded, "I naturally incline toward Arrowood, though he is so poor that he was obliged to come over in the steerage to continue his wooing of my daughter."

He let himself down into the dark trunk room, waited for me courteously and walked by my side to the stairway, both of us maintaining silence. I was deeply curious to know how he had entered and whether he expected to go down the front way and out the main door. We kept together to the third floor hall. I could have sworn to that. Then suddenly,
just as we reached the stairway, out went the lights, and we were in utter darkness. I smothered an exclamation, clutched my matches and struck a light, and as the stick flamed slowly I looked about for Bassford Hollister. But he had vanished as suddenly and completely as though a trap had yawned beneath us and swallowed him. I found the third floor switch, and it responded immediately, flooding the stair well to the lower hall, but I neither saw nor heard anything more of Hollister.

Astounded by this performance, I continued on to the lower floor to have a look around, and there, calmly reading by the library table, sat
Miss Octavia!

"Late hours, Mr. Ames!" she cried.
"I supposed you had retired long ago."

"Pardon my troubling you, but may I inquire, Miss Hollister, how long
you have been sitting here?"

The clock on the stair began to strike 12, and she listened composed-ly to a few of the deep toned strokes
before replying.

"Just half an hour. I thought someone knocked at my door about an hour ago. The lights were on and I came down, saw a magazine that had escaped my eye before and here
you find me."

"Some one knocked at your door?"

"I thought so. You know, the servants have an idea that the place is haunted, and I thought that if I sat
here the ghost might take it upon himself to walk. I confess to a slight disappointment that it is only you who have appeared. I suppose it wasn't you who knocked at my door?"

"No," I replied, laughing a little at her manner, "not unless it was you who switched off the lights as I was coming down from the fourth floor. I have been studying this chimney from the roof. I know something of the ways of electric switches, and they don't usually move
of their own accord."

"Your coming to this house has been the greatest joy to me, Mr.
Ames. I should not have imagined in a chance look at you that you were psychical, and yet such is clearly the fact. I assure you that I have not touched any switch since
I left my room. It was unnecessary,

I hope you will testify to the fact that I faced this day in the cheeriest

and most hopeful spirit."

"Not only shall I do so, Miss Hollister," I replied, trying to catch her own note, "but it will throughout my life give me the greatest satisfaction to set your case aright. To that extent let me be Horatio to your Hamlet."

"Thank you, milord," she returned,
with the utmost gravity. "And may I say further that the incident gives the stamp of authenticity to my ghost? I was obliged to pay those people double wages to lure them from the felicities of the city, and they must have been a good deal
alarmed to have left so precipitately.
You must excuse me now, as it is necessary for me to do the pastry
cook's work this morning, that individual having fled with the rest, and it being incumbent on me to maintain my fee simple in this property,
to make a dozen pies before high noon. But first I must visit the stables, where I believe the coachman still lingers, having been prevented from joining the stampede of house servants by the painful twinges
of gout."

With this she left me, and I began pecking at a grapefruit. It had been in my mind as I dressed that morning to play truant and visit the city.
It was almost imperative that I take a look at my office, and I had resolved upon a plan which would, I believed, give me the key to the ghost mystery. If Pepperton had built that

"That, Hezekiah, is a lie. It isn't quite square to deceive your aunt that way," I remarked soberly.

Hezekiah laughed.

"You absurdity! Don't you know Aunt Octavia yet? She will be perfectly overjoyed when she comes back and finds that note from Cecilia.
She likes disappearances, mysteries and all that kind of thing. But it is barely possible that you will have to wash the dishes. I can't, you see, for I'm not supposed to come on the reservation at all—not until Cecilia has found a husband. Isn't it perfectly delicious?"

"All of that, daughter of kings! I think that as soon as I can regain confidence in my own sanity I shall like it myself. But"—and I watched her narrowly—"you see, Hezekiah,
there is really a ghost, you know."

Her divine laugh bubbled mellowly.
She had walked guardedly to the window and turned swiftly with a mockery of fear in her face.

"Aunt Octavia approaches, and I must be off. But that ghost, Mr.
Chimney Man—when you find him
please let me know. There are a lot of things I want to ask some reliable ghost about the hereafter."

With that she fled, and I heard the front door close smartly after her. An instant later Miss Octavia appeared and asked solicitously how I liked my omelet.

New Hats Commonplace Enough
In the Hand, but the Pose!

FRUITS, FURS AND FEATHERS.

Trimming Decorations Were Never
More Bizarre—Although Medium
Sized Shapes Are the Favorites, High Adornments and Feathery Halos.

The new hats are almost commonplace in the hand, but the minute that they are posed correctly on the head their style is apparent. It requires some knack to arrange them at the most telling and becoming angle, and one must have an intimate acquaintance with the mirror to perform the feat successfully, for unless the hat sits just right on the head the beauty of the outline is lost, and the new hats owe much to the outline.

The majority are squashed down over one eye, generally the right one, and are raised high on the other side, showing a wide expanse of the hair. This gives a very jaunty air to the hat, which is accentuated by the curve of the brim and the trimming. The effect is rakish—that fact must be admitted—but those hats are universally becoming for the large features of the average American require one side or not, they sit low on the head.

Much to the surprise of many of the millinery authorities, the fall hats thus far have been small and medium. Not any stretch of the imagination can make these medium hats large, though it is possible that a little later in the winter, when there is more demand for the dressy hats, the large hat may return to favor. As the average American woman looks her best in a large picture hat, it is to be hoped that the longings of the milliners may be realized soon. The vogue for ostrich plumes may bring back the large hat, for ostrich plumes are certainly shown to the best advantage on large velvet hats, which, by the way, are here in abundance, but in the medium size and in the draped turbans.

There is very little novelty among the materials for hats. The one novelty, duvetyne, threatens to lose its exclusiveness through overpopularity, more's the pity, for it is an admirable fabric for hats. Composed, as is the millinery duvetyne, of silk and cotton, it drapes delightfully, is light in weight and blends well with velvet and the imitation fur cloths. The manufacturers of the moderate priced hats immediately recognized the advantages of this fabric and are using it extensively; hence the hesitancy of the milliners who supply the exclusive trade. Outside of duvetyne, velvet is the favorite material, with velours, plush, taffeta and the imitation fur cloths as close seconds. The hat pictured owes its charm to the daintily posed wings, which are bright green and blue colorings. The hat itself is of dark blue velours.

A Life Saver.

"No," said the timid man, "I don't want any flying machines today. I'm afraid of them."

"Why, sir," said the persuasive salesman, "a flying machine might save your life."

"How?"

All His Fault.

"Better lap up that spilt milk," said the first cat. "If the missus sees that mess you'll catch fits."

"Not me," said the second feline. "The woman I live with blames everything what happens on her husband."—Pittsburgh Post.

Much Harder.

"It is hard for one to have to live in the past," announced the melancholy man who had retired from business.

"Yes, but often it is harder to live down the past."—Buffalo Express.

CASES FOR THE BRIDE.

Wedding Present That Is Sure to Be Appreciated.

The housekeeper who has tried to keep centerpieces and doilies in any kind of order in her sideboard drawers along with tablecloths and the like will appreciate the usefulness of cases made especially for these articles. If one is not inclined to do needlework a very simple case may be devised by cutting large circles of cardboard and fastening them together quite simply with tapes, says the Modern Priscilla. However, to make a very pretty set of cases one should cover these cardboard circles with white linen. The case is formed by two circles of bristol board covered on both sides with the fabric. Have the linen carefully pressed before mounting it on the cardboard. Cut the linen one-half inch larger than the cardboard, turn it over the edge of the cardboard and fasten by long stitches taken from side to side. When this is secure fold in the edge of the other circle of linen and apply it to the reverse side of the card. Top sew these two round pieces of linen together over the cardboard. Make two complete pieces. In the center of one fasten the cross ribbons, which may be tied over the top section. This cardboard circle covered with linen may be finished around the edges with a white cord carefully top sewed to hide the sewing of the linen.

In Your EATON Catalogue

JUST THINK!—Christmas is almost with us. A few more weeks and then the joyous season begins. With it comes, of course, the usual tokens of goodwill—the giving and receiving of gifts. "What shall it be?" is the premier thought in most minds, and to many it becomes a great problem indeed. Those of you who have a copy of our Fall and Winter Catalogue need have no such experience. We say this advisedly, because we believe that if you will but take the trouble to look through your catalogue you will find it a veritable storehouse of worthy merchandise. Further than that, there are many pages which list just such articles that are of popular choice and pleasurable interest.

THE TIME TO BUY IS NOW—AND THE REASON WHY

So many conditions may later arise that it is well for us to buy gifts early. To put off your purchase too long often brings disappointment. Sit down now and give this matter your earnest consideration and make your choice while stocks are large and varied. Do not forget, also, that ours is not primarily a Christmas catalogue but a comprehensive showing of articles of daily use in the home or the personal requirement.

If you have mislaid your catalogue, or will be glad to mail a copy free if you have not now one from any reason, we will send us your name and address.

ECONOMIZE LABOR IN HOG FEEDING

As a general thing, on the average farm too much time is used in feeding and caring for hogs, says the Iowa Homestead. Unnecessarily slow and tedious methods are employed, whereas shorter cuts in feeding than those practiced at present would produce equally good results either by the use of horse labor, by the rearrangement of the feeding yards and troughs, by the more careful use of pasture and crops that may be harvested by the hogs and thus reduce the number of hours required to care for the animals and at the same time save labor.

Where one is feeding many hogs it frequently is a labor saver to use a

It is claimed for the Chester White hogs that no other breed excels them in prolificacy, that they are of gentle disposition and quickly adapt themselves to new surroundings. They fatten easily at any age and dress a high per cent of marketable pork. The Chester White has been known as a distinct breed for almost a century in this country, having had its origin from some white boars imported from England. The two yearlings pictured were prize winners last fall.

horse in transporting swill, water and feed directly from tank and bin to the pens, yards or field in which the animals are kept. This is much easier on the feeder and is more quickly done. Wide alley hog houses permit of the one horse truck not alone for hauling feed in, but for hauling out the manure and thereby keeping the surroundings clean and sanitary.

There are few who have taken the trouble to separate the shoats according to size so that they could be fed more easily and satisfactorily. Many prefer to feed hogs of all sizes together, either continuing the feeding until all are full or else wasting time chasing the larger ones away until the smaller ones are fed. Feeding all the animals will hold is a wasteful method, while beating up the big ones while the smaller eat is not conducive to gains in either the old or young. In both cases too much time is consumed and without good results. It is always well in feeding hogs to sort according to size and limit the number to twenty or thirty in a feeding place.

A sufficient number of feed troughs should be provided so that all the hogs in each feeding place can eat at once. The troughs should be located under swinging panels so that the hogs can all be shut out until the slop has been placed in the trough. This saves slop

When the cow is fresh the proportion of water is greater than at any other time. The fat globules are then larger and consequently more easily separated in the process of churning than later on, when the cow becomes nearly dry. During the latter part of the period of lactation, too, the milk becomes viscous or sticky as the water content diminishes, and the minute globules of fat are more easily entangled in it, thereby retarding separation. This, then, is one cause of delay in churning.

The fresh cow never gives trouble on that score. The obvious remedy is to mix the milk of a fresh cow with the other, or if there is no fresh cow in the herd the milk may, as soon as drawn from the cow, be diluted with hot water to raise the temperature to at least 100 degrees before separation, which relieves the viscous condition.

Another cause of delay in churning is attempting to churn unripe cream or

K. P. Pontiac Lass, here pictured, is the latest world's champion in the production of milk and butter fat. She is a pure bred Holstein and holds records for butter production for all periods from seven to 100 days. Her record for seven days is 585.9 pounds of milk, 44.18 pounds of butter. In thirty days she produced 2,316.4 pounds of milk and 171.50 pounds of butter. She is by King of the Pontiacs, and her dam is Tweede De Kol Lass. She is owned by Stevens brothers, Liverpool, N. Y.

cream which is too thin. Properly ripened cream is about as thick as molasses. When a cup is dipped into it a thick coat of cream should adhere to it, and it should be pleasantly acid, free from lumps, either of cream or curd and without any whey in the bottom of the can. This cream if churned at a temperature of 60 to 62 degrees ought to be made into butter in twenty or thirty minutes unless the churn is too full. And right here another trouble is arrived at, one which accounts for much unnecessary time spent at the churn handle. For best results the churn should never be filled more than one-third full of cream. It swells upon being agitated, and the lessened opportunity for concussion results in a longer time being required to bring the butter than would have been the case with a smaller quantity.

The temperature of the cream at the time of churning should also be taken into consideration. Trouble is apt to result unless a reliable thermometer is depended upon, and especially is this true when the cream is cold.

To sum the matter up, these things should be kept in mind: It is the cream from the stripper or farrow cow in nine cases out of ten that makes the trouble when the butter does not come after a reasonable time in churning. Thin cream should be avoided and the amount of acidity quite pronounced.

VITALITY REGAINED KIDNEYS CURED

Health Restored By "Fruit-a-tives"

HAGERSVILLE, ONT., Aug. 26th. 1913. "About two years ago, I found my health in a very bad state. My kidneys and liver were not doing their work, and I became all run-down. I felt the need of some good remedy, and having seen 'Fruit-a-tives' advertised, I decided to try them.

Their effect, I found more than satisfactory. Their action was mild and the results all that could have been expected.

My liver and kidneys resumed their normal action after I had taken upwards of a dozen boxes, and I regained my old time vitality. Today, I am as well as ever, the best health I have ever enjoyed, and I unhesitatingly give you this testimonial for publication if you wish."

B. A. KELLY.

In hundreds of letters received by the Fruit-a-tives Company, the same expression is used "Fruit-a-tives is the best kidney remedy in the world". At any rate, these tablets have proved the best to the hundreds of men and women who have been cured by taking them. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size, 25c. At all dealers or sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

LUCKY BASEBALL FLUKE.

Think of a Player Making a Home Run on an Infield Fly!

"In all the years I have been attending baseball games—and they are more than I could care to number—there is one play which stands out in my mind as the greatest I have ever seen," says a contributor to the American Magazine.

"There was no wonderful skill embodied in the play. It was, I suppose, pure luck. But the fact remains that I have never seen it duplicated nor approached, and it is, so far as I know, unique in the annals of baseball.

"The game was one between Washington and Cincinnati back in the days when Washington was in the National league. The score was 1 to 0 in Cincinnati's favor in the last half of the ninth. Two men were out, and Washington had a runner on second, with Wilmot at the bat. On the first ball pitched Wilmot swung hard and knocked an infield fly, the highest I have ever seen. The ball went up and up until it was visible only as a tiny speck.

"With the crack of the bat the runner on second had started for home, and he crossed the plate before the ball began to fall. Buck Ewing, Cincinnati's first baseman; McPhee, who played second, and 'Germany' Smith, the shortstop, all gathered between first and second awaiting for the ball to drop. Wilmot sped around the bases at top speed and passed third as the ball fell just inside the triangle of waiting infielders.

"The ball struck the hard earth of the base line and bounded high in the air, Ewing having to wait for it to descend a second time before he could make the throw home. Wilmot slid

according to size and limit the number to twenty or thirty in a feeding place. A sufficient number of feed troughs should be provided so that all the hogs in each feeding place can eat at once. The troughs should be located under swinging panels so that the hogs can all be shut out until the slop has been placed in the trough. This saves slop and labor, and the pigs do better. Much more time is gained in feeding when not annoyed by the hogs while stopping than when feeding in the ordinary manner.

STOVER FOR SILAGE.

Dry Corn Fodder Makes an Inferior Article of Feed.

Corn fodder or dry stover may be put in the silo successfully, giving it enough water to wet it down thoroughly, but not enough to leave free water in the silo. Such silage will keep, but it is not as good as that put up when the corn is in the proper stage of development for the silo. The best silage is made when the corn begins to dent. Dry fodder has lost some of its feeding value and is not as palatable.

The acid is formed by the action of bacteria on the sugars in the plant. This action is accompanied by a rise in temperature. The conversion of the sugar into acetic, lactic and other acids is also accompanied by the formation of gas. The gas drives the air out of the silage. The preserving qualities are due to the acid and more to the absence of air. Wherever air gets into the silo there is found spoiled silage.—Hoard's Dairyman.

THE DAIRYMAN.

Whether the grass in the pasture is short or not, the calves will like a bit of hay to nibble on. It is one of the very best things you can give them to eat.

To make more profit in the dairy, try to feed one cow as much as, in the old way, you gave to two cows.

Plan now to make the cows most comfortable during the coming winter if you wish to make a profit from them.

Don't turn the calf to the feed trough with cows and steers and expect it to get a proper amount of food. It will be fought away, while the older stock devour the portion it should have.

Begin now to cull the herd. If any cow is below the standard in capacity after a fair trial feed her off.

DELAY IN CHURNING.

Causes That Prevent the Formation of Butter Globules.

There is always a reason for it when the butter fails to "come" after a reasonable amount of churning, writes W. H. Underwood in the Iowa Homestead. There are, in fact, a number of different conditions which may combine to cause the difficulty, or any one alone may do it. All milk is composed of water, casein, fat and other ingredients, the three named predominating.

When in feeding hogs to sort according to size and limit the number to twenty or thirty in a feeding place. To sum the matter up, these things should be kept in mind: It is the cream from the stripper or farrow cow in nine cases out of ten that makes the trouble when the butter does not come after a reasonable time in churning. Thin cream should be avoided and the amount of acidity quite pronounced. Let the amount in the churn be not more than one-third of its capacity and use the thermometer to make sure that the cream is at the proper temperature for churning.

Checkers.

Checkers is said by some to be a very old game, while others declare it to be of comparatively modern origin. Whence it came is absolutely unknown. The game is also called drafts, and there are many varieties of it—Chinese, English, Polish, Spanish, Italian and Turkish. It is also found among the native tribes of the interior of New Zealand.

To drop. Willmot sped around the bases at top speed and passed third as the ball fell just inside the triangle of waiting infielders.

"The ball struck the hard earth of the base line and bounded high in the air, Ewing having to wait for it to descend a second time before he could make the throw home. Willmot slid around the plate and was safe, having won the game with a home run on an infield fly, a feat which has never been duplicated in professional baseball."

To Move Pictures.

People who stand their family portraits against the walls while packing and unpacking their household goods cause a great deal of broken glass, scratches and dents. The first thing to be done when moving into your new home should be to hang the pictures any place in order to get them out of the way without waiting to choose a scheme of arrangement. This will prevent a great deal of breakage and other damage.—New York Telegram.

The Ontario Government Demonstration car was in Napanee on Monday and was an interesting exhibit to a large number of citizens and farmers from the surrounding country. The exhibits bring forcibly to the mind the many advantages of northern Ontario, where land can be purchased very cheaply. All of the products exhibited were grown or land purchased at 50 cents per acre. No one need starve in New Ontario, who is willing and able to work—and settlers who had little to start with are doing well in that country.

Word was received on Thursday by Mrs. W. H. Hunter, of the death of her sister, Mrs. James McGarrey, in Hotel Dieu, Kingston. Deceased had ill since July 2nd with heart trouble, part of the time with her sister in Napanee, and the remainder in Kingston. Up until two years ago Mrs. McGarrey resided on Johnston street, Kingston, then came to live with her sister, Mrs. Hunter. Mr. McGarrey predeceased her some years ago. EVENING RECITAL

The regular meeting of the W. C. T. U. will be held in Grace church, Ladies' Parlour, Wednesday, November 26th, 1913, at 3 p.m. Special programme. All cordially invited.

Mr. James A. Vanalstine, east end liveryman, has recently purchased a handsome enclosed carriage, which he intends using for hack purposes, and he will now be in a position to give first-class satisfaction in all hack calls for our townspeople. 50-d

Mr. Thos. A. Huffman passed away on Saturday last at Wheatland, Wyoming. Mr. Huffman was for twenty-five years one of Napanee's well-known druggists and a highly respected citizen. About six years ago Mr. Huffman gave up the drug business and moved with his family to Wheatland to take up farming.

The U. E. L. Chapter, L. O. D. E. wish to commend most heartily, Mrs. Frank Carson, one of the ladies in charge of the ball-room on the occasion of their entertainment on Friday evening last, for the courage she displayed in dealing alone with the disagreeables, she encountered from some of the guests, when endeavouring to enforce the rules posted in many parts of the room by the committee in charge. The Chapter would never have allowed Mrs. Carson to be placed in such a position, had they dreamed for a moment, that any of the guests, would not only have disregarded but defied, the request courteously made—and persisted in dancing these objectionable dances.

ALICE L. HARSHAW,
Regent.

Nelson Sills, a life long and highly respected resident of North Fredericksburgh Township, passed away very suddenly on Saturday last. His son, Mr. C. Sills, had come to Napanee to purchase some supplies, leaving his father at home in apparently good health, but on his return home in the course of a few hours, he found the deceased lying dead on the floor with his face bruised where he had struck the floor. Heart failure was the cause of death. The late Mr. Sills was aged 87 years and 10 months, and leaves five children, two sons, Messrs. C. Sills at home; Mr. W. R. Sills, Mathematical Master, in the Kingston Collegiate Institute, and three daughters, Mrs. Leavens, Prince Edward, and Mrs. Thos. Gibson and Mrs. W. B. Pringle, Napanee. The funeral took place on Tuesday from his late residence to Riverside cemetery.

The Missionary Anniversary services held last Sunday were eminently successful. Rev. A. R. Sanderson, of Belleville, and the pastor gave addresses at the morning service. In the evening Rev. Dr. Endicott, General Missionary Secretary, gave a wonderfully inspiring address that touched all hearts and gave an impetus to the cause of missions that will be felt for years to come. The offerings of the day exceeded the offerings of any former year and there are many subscriptions that will come in later. Next Sunday morning there will be a second reception service for new members, after which the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper will be administered. Let every member and adherent be present. It has been decided to withdraw the evening service on account of the re-opening services in the Presbyterian Church.

Repairs and Improvements done on St. Andrew's Church.
At an expenditure of about seven thousand dollars the following improvements have been made: Extension of sixteen feet to the north end of the building, providing thereby a choir loft and organ space, and two rooms, one on each side of the organ, one for the choir and one for the minister. In the basement considerable seating capacity has been gained. An extensive steam heating plant has been installed. Beautiful, modest and becoming decorations have been done on the walls, etc., of the auditorium and school room. New front doors, exterior and interior; staining or painting and varnishing of all the woodwork above and below; carpeting the whole of the church. Installation of an excellent electric lighting system; improvement to some of the furniture. Shingling of whole and repairing tower, painting of the exterior, painting of the Manse, and a few other minor improvements.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the residence of the bride's uncle, Mr. E. W. Scott, 1205 Athabasca Ave., on October 11th, when Miss Myrtle M. Scott was united in marriage with Mr. Telford C. Johnston, of Edmonton. The wedding march was played by Miss Marion Way, formerly of Toronto, and the ceremony which took place under a wedding bell, was conducted by the Rev. L. S. Wight, of the Highlands Methodist Church. The bride was gownned in ivory duchesse satin with shadow lace and embroidered in seed pearls and sequin. She carried lilies of the valley and white roses and wore the groom's gift a pearl pendant. Little Miss Elizabeth Collinson performed the duties of ring bearer. The grooms gift to the organist was a pearl crescent and the ring bearer pearl beauty pins. Mrs. E. W. Scott, aunt of the bride, was gownned in pink satin with oveydress of black lace embroidered in sequin and beads and wore a pearl necklace, gift of the groom. After congratulations about twenty-five guests sat down to the wedding breakfast. The bride received many beautiful gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Johnston left on the 2.45 train for Calgary, Banff and other points. At home after Nov. 15th, at 1205, Athabasca Ave.—Edmonton Journal,

The Historical Lecture.

Next Friday evening, November 28th, the people of this county will be given an opportunity of hearing one of Canada's most distinguished speakers, the Hon. Mr. Justice Riddell, of Toronto. The lecture will be under the auspices of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society and everyone will be welcomed at the meeting.
Justice Riddell is recognized for his ability to express himself in a clear manner and of being able to hold his audience in close attention until he has concluded his remarks. He is probably as much sought after for addresses as any Canadian of the day.
His lectures in the larger cities in both Canada and the United States attract attention and are always quoted at considerable length by the press.
The subject to be given here "An American Soldier's Experiences in the war of 1812" is most appropriate at this time. The meeting will begin at eight o'clock p.m. sharp. Everyone interested in hearing a good lecture
should be present at Historical Hall
next Friday night.
